As was expected and predicted, among others, by Senator Borah, who favored the Patman bill, the Senate sustains the President's veto and the veterans will not get their money, now.

If and when they do get it, it will probably be on the basis of issuing government bonds, paying lenders of money, in interest, exactly as much as the veterans will get from their bonus. Some, lacking the pawnbroker complex, will wonder why it is necessary, since government prints the money, controls credit, promises no gold for its bonds, to double the public debt by unnecessary interest payments.

The bonus was beaten by eight Senate votes. Thirty-two senators come up for re-election next year. You would say, offhand, that some of them might regret having beaten the bonus, after a majority of the Senate had approved it.

The fact that few Americans remember anything for as much as a year, will comfort some senators.

Senator Huey P. Long seeks to know something about "this body," meaning the Senate. Before the vote on the veto was taken he said:

"The veterans think this veto is going to be over-ridden, but I know it isn't. I knew two days ago that our case was hopeless."

Six more navy fliers killed in the Pacific "war games"—rather serious "games."

Some will ask:

"Are rules for navy flying made by pilots that understand flying, or by men that never fly? Who issue and sustain the rule that compels fliers to keep almost as close together as marching infantry?"

In real war a pilot is no infantryman, working, obeying mechanically. He is a GENERAL, in command of his plane, using his own judgment at every moment.

Why in peace time should he risk his life "wing to wing," inviting disaster?

Father Coughlin, of Detroit, talking to more than twenty thousand in New York, evoked hissing and booing for the administration in connection with the bonus veto and explained the necessity of doing away with a "vicious, plutocratic, capitalistic system, which for the last fifty years has operated to concentrate wealth in the hands of a few."

Father Coughlin might have gone farther back than fifty years, and found "capitalism" vigorous; back to the days of Jacques Coeur, to the days of the Medici, back further still to old King Croesus, showing his piles of gold to Solon.

In their present state of civilization, men like money; "smart men" get what they want. They will continue to get money, either as members of the "vicious plutocratic capitalistic system," or as members of some other system, labor union, "share-the-wealth" or some other.

Heads of important industries, steel included, tell the government they would like "to be let alone."

That is too much to ask, in these times. The government has ideas that can be carried out only by money. Business is supposed to have the money, and you cannot extract it by letting business alone.

Mr. Grace says the steel industry has "lost $268,000,000 in three years."

The natural question arises:

"How much has it left, and how can tax collectors get it?"

Hereafter, Smith College girls "may wear shorts on the streets of Northampton, Mass." Shorts, are ordinary breeches cut off a long way above the knee, legs protruding, usually naked. Northampton's police chief says:

"It's all right so long as this thing is not carried to extremes."

Great grandmothers of the "Smile Girls," and Dr. Mary Walker, who was arrested for wearing a stove-pipe hat, man's coat and long trousers, might consider extreme modern "shorts" that would keep dry in deep water.

Amelia Earhart, probably the best American flier, man or woman, flew alone across the Atlantic ocean, flew from Hawaii to California, 2400 miles, alone, ahead of any man; flew alone from Mexico City to New York, 700 miles over the Gulf of Mexico, in a one-engine land plane, beat Colonel Lindbergh's time from Mexico City to Washington by 14 hours.

Now, driving an automobile from an airport to Chicago's "loop," Amelia Earhart Putnam runs out of gas and is pushed to a filling station by an obliging policeman.

Describe that, wittingly, in ten words if you can.

Roosevelt Compromises on 21 Months' NRA

CURLEY SPURNS MILLENS

CHIEFS AGREE ON 21-MONTH NRA PLAN

By Associated Press

Washington, May 24—President Roosevelt and House and Senate leaders agreed tentatively today on a 21½ months' extension of NRA and giving the recovery agency jurisdiction over businesses "substantially affecting" interstate commerce.

Price-fixing would be barred.

They reached that understanding at a White House conference as William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was insisting before the House ways and means committee on a two-year extension.

Green described as "short-sighted, reactionary and anti-social" those who opposed the extension.

WARNS OF STRIKES

He said nation-wide strikes would result if NRA were not continued at least two years.

Ready to testify later along the same lines was General Hugh S.

Boston Tax Rate $37.20

Governor Curley today signed the bill which pegs the Boston tax rate at $37.20 per $1000 of valuation.

This is the bill which was bitterly protested by Mayor Mansfield, but which the Legislature passed by large fajorities.

It was the first time in history that the Boston rate was pronounced by the Legislature and Governor.

$15,000 Balm To Miss Bond

By Associated Press

New York, May 24—A supreme court jury today awarded $15,000 damages to Miss Katherine Lisy Bond in her $500,000 breach of promise suit brought against Paul Spencer Clapp, former Herbert Hoover aid.

B. M. Webster, counsel for Clapp, immediately motioned for the setting aside of the verdict and a new trial, both denied by Justice Aaron Steuer. Webster said an appeal will be filed.

The jury deliberated for one hour and 50 minutes.

Miss Bond left the courtroom while the jury retired and was not present when it brought in the verdict for her.

Clapp declined to comment.

EVA MORRISON BARES PLOTS OF RIVALS

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Lying on her City Hospital cot, where poisoned candy sent her, Eva Morrison, swimming champion, today revealed that she has been the target of a previous poisoning and vilification by jealous rivals for several years.

Eva, six times winner of the Boston Light swim and owner of scores of cups and medals for prowess in the water, became violently ill yesterday after eating candy sent her through the mails.

Today she was recovering from the effects of the poison, although at one time her condition was so serious the name was on the danger list.

In an exclusive interview with the Boston Evening American the swimmer declared today that her vengeful candy sender had even gone so far as to place on the package the return address of a very dear male friend.

BECAME VIOLENTLY ILL

She said:

"The day before yesterday I received a box of candy at my home, 81 Linden street, Allston. I took it in to work with me yesterday morning to the medical library here at City Hospital, where I am employed.

"I ate a few pieces because I am very fond of sweets. Nothing happened. Later in the afternoon I ate some more and I became ill. It was only a Godsend that I didn't pass it around. I

Swim Star Undaunted by Poison Plotters

"Jealous rivals are to blame," Eva Morrison, six times winner of Boston Light swim and holder of many records, charged today from her cot in City Hospital. She is recuperating from the effects of poisoned candy sent to her through the mails. She says she is undismayed and more determined than ever to swim the English channel.

DENIES PLEA FOR SANITY INQUIRY

Governor Curley slammed the door today on the hopes of the Millen brothers for life. Denying request of their counsel, George Stanley Harvey, for a mental examination of the doomed brothers, he told the lawyer:

"There is nothing further I will do thath might result in any delay in carrying out the sentence of the court."

He said he considered the appeal for a mental examination to be "subterfuge" and strongly indicated he would entertain no plea for clemency or commutation or further respite if the United States Supreme Court refuses to review the case.

Signatures to a petition asking Governor Curley to commute to life imprisonment the death sentence imposed on Murton and Irving Millen were being sought today.

Joseph Millen, Roxbury, father of the slayers condemned to die with Abe Faber on June 5, is the sponsor of the movement.

Harry Millen, brother of the doomed men, at liberty on bail after indictment in connection with an escape plot, said it was planned to place the petition before Governor Curley "as soon as the Supreme Court turns down the appeal for review."

SEEK 150,000 NAMES

The United States Supreme Court is expected to rule on the review appeal on June 3, two days before the expiration of the respite granted by the Governor.

The Millen family seeks 150,000 signers of the petition.

There were reports, also, that a demonstration in behalf of the brothers, before the Governor, would be attempted.

Faber, Tech graduate and accomplice of the Millens in the slaying of two Needham policemen, is not named in the petition.

The petition sets forth that the Millens were insane, that they were "convicted by newspapers," that the inflamed public mind prevented due consideration being given the insanity defense.

It asserts that "mercy rather than public revenge should be shown the prisoners on account of their youth and the peculiar circumstances under which they were brought up, to imprisonment will meet the ends of justice."

Faber's mother, in the event of Supreme Court refusal to review the case, will make a personal plea to the governor, probably on June 4.

Meanwhile, in Dedham jail, Murton's bride, Norma — her liberty waiting upon the execution of her husband — was reported to have failed in health during the last few weeks.

Officials ascribed her condition to worry over the approaching execution.

She has lost considerable weight and has been carefully watched by Dr. Clarence Benson, jail physician.

The usual yard exercise restrictions have been lifted in order that she could have an extra hour and a half in the afternoon sunshine.

Roosevelt for Limited Bonus

By International News Service

Washington, May 24—President Roosevelt will accept legislation to pay World War veterans immediately about $750 on $1000 bonus certificates, but will go no farther.

This was the measured view of Senate leaders today as bonus supporters renewed their fight to drive through some sort of a bill providing for immediate cash payment of the certificates in full.

SAD FOR BABY WAIF

Little Blue-Eyed Girl Nobody Wants Turned Over to State by Hospital

Cambridge's baby girl, abandoned in a hallway on Harvard street, Cambridge, 12 days ago, today left the Cambridge City Hospital in the custody of a Cambridge welfare official, to be turned over to the state.

The infant probably eight weeks old, was taken to the hospital on May 14 by Cambridge Police Officers Fred Collins and Matthew McNamara.

At the behest of Thomas Logan of Mellen street and Joseph O'Leary of Essex street, the two officers went to the Harvard street hallway and found the sleeping infant wrapped in clean blankets.

Neighbors said they saw a woman drive up early in the morning in a dark sedan, carry a bundle into the hallway and then disappear.

There were many and faces at the City Hospital today when the Cambridge welfare official called to take the baby into the State House in Boston.

With her bewitching dimple and roguish blue eyes, the Baby Nobody Wants, during her stay at the hospital became quite a companion to the nurses.

Little Enters Golf Final

St. Anne's-on-the-Sea, England, May 24—W. Lawson Little of San Francisco defends his British amateur golf championship here tomorrow against Dr. William Tweddell of England, "dark horse" entry, in the 36-hole title finale to the week's play.

Little this morning drubbed G. L. Q. Henriques of England by 6 and 4 in a quarterfinal. Then he met and conquered Robert Sweeney, New York who has lived in London in recent years, in the semifinal by a 3 and 2 margin

Tweddell, British amateur champion in 1927, defeated Tony Torrance of England in the semifinal by 2 and 1.

The homebred foe of Little in the windup was on the short end of 3 to 1 odds this evening. The American's power is expected to give him his second consecutive British amateur title, a feat that has been duplicated only three times in the entire history of this tourney.

OATH BILL REVIVED

Moran to Lead Fight for School Teacher Allegiance Measure

The oath of allegiance bill, adversely reported by committee, will be revived in the Senate next week.

Senate President James G. Moran will lead the fight.

He announced today that on Monday, for the first time since his election, he will leave the dias and take the floor.

He will argue for substitution of the bill for the adverse report of the committee on education.

The bill, which would require teachers, instructors and professors in schools and colleges to take the oath of allegiance to federal and state Constitutions, received the support of every patriotic organization in the state. College praxidants opposed it.

VETERANS MASS FOR BONUS MARCH ON WASHINGTON

BATTLE LAUNCHED TO PASS 'VETO-PROOF' MEASURE

Washington, May 24—The band of 40 senators who killed the Patman bonus measure, today found the resurrected issue flaming at white heat.

Senators and representatives, called on to explain their stand by constituents, parried with the feeble "inflationary" explanation.

Sorely beset, however, they are admitting their willingness now to advance new bonus legislation.

Meantime from Los Angeles came word of the formation of a "second bonus army."

Generalissimo Royal W. Robertson, who led the coast contingent of the bonus army to the White House a few years ago, directed the campaigning from the Los Angeles city hall.

He said:

"We have contacted bonus army leaders from San Francisco, San Diego and Sacramento by telegram, urging them to meet with our veterans."

VETERANS SWELL 'ARMY'

Hardly had the Robertson word gone out when veterans began arriving to swell the nucleus of the Los Angeles "Army."

The army this time will make the trip to Washington by automobile, Robertson said, and there will be no hoppers. He declared:

"We hope to raise a contingent of no fewer than 4000 men, half of whom will be from Los Angeles, 2000 from San Francisco, 500 from Sacramento and the remainder from San Diego."

From Oregon, Washington and other states came reports of veterans eager and ready to swell the coast contingent.

CALLED CRUEL BLOW

James E. Zan Zandt, Veterans of Foreign Wars' commander, called the Senate vote "a cruel blow" to the veterans, but forecast ultimate victory at the session. He said:

"This action turned into heartaches the high hopes raised in thousands of needy veterans' homes. It shall not soon be forgotten."

An immediate conference of veteran leaders was urged in Zan Vandt's wire to Frank L. Belgrano, commander of the American Legion.

A tip to watch out for the next move came with a wink from Representative Patman, author of the vetoed bill.

He said:

"No question is ever settled until it is settled right."

No sooner was the outcome of the vote announced than Senator Clark (D., Mo.) served notice of a motion to suspend the rules to add a new bonus bill to the pending $460,000,000 naval appropriation measure.

Clark's move had only partial support from the bonus forces. Others wished to wait and attempt to add the Patman bill to some more vital administration measure such as the NRA extension bill or the social security program.

Still others felt the best course would be to start all over again with the Vinson bill as separate legislation.

Belgrano Against March, Hits Senate as Unfair

By Associated Press

Salt Lake City, May 24—Veterans of the World War were described today by Frank N. Belgrano, Jr., national commander of the American Legion, as "tired of being taken up blind alleys by congressmen and senators interested in something else."

By that, he said in commenting on the Senate's action in sustaining the bonus veto, "I mean interest in currency expansion."

He declined to verify reports that his hurried western trip was part of a campaign to rally Legion forces for a new attempt to obtain passage of the bill.

Belgrano termed "most un-American" any attempts by veterans to stage demonstrations on a march on the capital.

Declaring expansion is not in the province of a bonus bill, he said:

"The Legion never has tried to tell Congress how the bonus should be paid. All we contend is that the bonus should be paid now."

"Although it's dated 1945, it is long past due. Our real task was to justify our claim, and then leave the rest to Congress."

He branded the attempt to pay the bonus with "printing press money" as nothing less than putting the veterans "on the spot to determine the merits or demerits of any inflation or monetary matter."

Recall of Sen. Hayden Sought for Veto Vote

Phoenix, Ariz., May 24—A recall move against Senator Carl Hayden, Democrat, had been launched here today because of his vote to sustain the veto on the Patman bonus bill.

FORMER QUINCY DOCTOR KILLED IN VT. CRASH

By Associated Press

Williamstown, Vt., May 24—Dr. Bert S. Pierson, 40, formerly of Quincy, Mass., and Mrs. Mary Krause, both of Windsor, were killed, and Dr. William Krause and Dr. Pierson's wife were critically injured in a collision today with a truck on the Barre highway.

They were returning to their homes from a Rotary convention.

The automobile in which the two couples were riding was demolished.

All four were rushed to Barre city hospital, where Mrs. Krause and Dr. Pierson were pronounced dead.

Dr. Krause suffered a possible skull fracture and deep lacerations of the head, while Mrs. Pierson also had received severe head injuries.

Dr. Pierson, a native of Quincy (Mass.) was a state veterinarian, having been engaged for several years in tuberculosis eradiation work.

NRA EXTENDED 21 MONTHS

Johnson, first boss of the Blue Eagle.

The White House conferees were Senators Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader; Harrison of Mississippi, chairman of the finance committee; Speaker Byrns and Representative Doughton (D- North Carolina, chairman of the House ways and means committee.

It was reported by one conferee that if necessary everything but a 21½ months' extension would be discarded in order to get the legislation through by June 16, the day the Recovery Act expires.

It could be followed, he explained, by subsequent legislation embodying the other things the President deemed necessary.

NO GENERAL STRIKE

After warning of strikes, Green added he wanted no Congressman to think that organized labor was "bluffing."

Answering question after question fired at him by the 18 committeemen seated at a semi-circular table, he implied, however, that he did not have a "general strike" in mind.

"We explained our position on that question rather clearly at the time of the San Francisco strike," he elaborated.

At that time the A. F. of L. rejected proposals for a "general strike."

Green insisted he had no intention of trying to "threaten" or "intimidate" Congress into doing what labor wanted.

"We are just here to reason with you," he said. "The chief objective of the American Federation of Labor is to seek industrial peace."

Gospel of Heroism Cited By Duce in War Talk

By Associated Press

Rome, May 24—Premier Benito Mussolini told massed thousands of soldiers and civilians today: "ITALY NOW IS READY FOR ANY TRIAL."

His declaration came in the course of an observance of the twentieth anniversary of Italy's entrance into the World War, a ceremony which included the presenting of battle flags to regiments which replace units assigned to East Africa.

His listeners packed Venezia square, in front of his office. They heard him say:

"The words of an unknown Italian soldier scrawled on the wall of a house demolished by a shell, 'It is better to live one day as a lion than 100 days as a lamb,' are not merely an order —they are gospel for us."

"We swear to respect this sacred injunction everywhere and in spite of anyone."

He added:

"Let no one in Italy or abroad delude themselves. Italy will consider carefully before arriving at a decision, but when the decision is reached, then she will go forward without any turning back . .

"It is necessary, once we have started, to burn our ships and guide ourselves along the road of destiny with a firm hand."

TARGET FOR SIX YEARS

"Of course, I didn't suspect the candy when I received it, because in the upper left hand corner of the box was the name of a very dear friend of mine.

"Whoever sent it, evidently knew that I would not hesitate to eat anything that boy sent me. I know this boy had nothing to do with it.

"I blame a jealous swimming rival.

"As a matter of fact, this is not the first time that a hoax has been played on me.

"For the last five or six years, from the time I reached my peak as a swimming champion, I have been the target for very mean and despicable tricks at the hands of jealous swimmers.

"Now that I look back, I remember that I received a box of candy five years ago that kept me out of a swim and laid me up for several weeks.

"At the time, I thought it was some food that I had eaten in a restaurant, but, now I remember that I had eaten candy at that time.

RECEIVED PROFANE NOTES

"I have received—sometimes on the day of a race, sometimes on the day before—challenging postcards and letters, profane and horrible in meaning.

"I remember getting one letter the day before a swim. In it was a cartoon of a tombstone, inscribed, 'Here Will Lie the Body of Eva Morrison.'

"Until now, I have been a good sport and kept my mouth shut about the dirty, mean tricks played on me.

"Now I am determined that the person responsible for poisoning me shall be punished."

Eva revealed that she will leave on the steamer Normandie from New York on June 7. She will go to England and attempt the Channel swim at the first favorable opportunity.

Dr. Merrill Moore of the City Hospital staff is arranging a send-off party for her.

JOBS FOR QUINS? NEIGHBORS WORRYING

FIRST BIRTHDAY 4 DAYS OFF

Callander, Ont., May 24—Many persons whose interest is remote, to say the least, are worried today over the future of the Dionne quintuplets.

Some think that when the girls get bigger they ought to go home and help mama with the dishes. This, of course, is not quite a modern view.

Another suggestion is that the babies might grow up and become a basketball team. Probably nothing will come of it, and, anyway, the "quins" would be compelled to play boys' rules.

ALL UP TO THE KING

The "what's-your-hurry" element of the community is tut-tutting concerning the future life, loves and learning of Callander's five famous females.

Here it is only four days from their first birthday anniversary, and the quintuplets have not been registered for so much as a kindergarten.

"If," the furore, in the final analysis, is to no avail, because the matter is not one for worriers to decide.

The King of England will take care of it at the proper time.

Neither Papa Oliva Dionne nor Mamma Elzire has had much to say about their five descendants.

His Majesty serves as guardian for the babies, until they reach the age of 18.

The matter of education already has proved vexing to the Dionnes. Of their five other children, two are of school age.

Schools hereabouts are few and far between and, consequently, Ernest Dionne, eight, and Rose, seven, are still completely in the dark in the matter of verbs and multiplication.

PAPA NOT SATISFIED

Here is a household of 10 children, with a strip of highway through the middle. On one side of the road, in their private dwelling, with their own laundress, cook, nurses, doctors, lawyers and bankers, are the quintuplets.

On the other side, in the four-room frame farm house with their parents, live "the five other children."

Papa Dionne loves all his children. He would like to have that official road between them removed.

Dogs Bite 4 E. Boston Boys

Three dogs bit four boys in East Boston today.

The cases made a total of 22 reported in the district since May 1, a number that is causing officials concern.

Joseph Surrette, 6, and his brother, Elmer, 4, were bitten by a terrier while sitting on the doorsteps of their home at 15 Marion street.

Thomas Molenaro, 8, playing on his back porch at 147 Cottage street, was attacked by a stray mongrel.

Another mongrel bit John Powers, 10, of 134 Everett street.

All the victims were treated in East Boston Relief Hospital by Dr. Samuel Sidell.

COUGHLIN PLAN TO OPEN 3-WAY BANK WAR

Washington, May 24—Decision of the Senate banking and currency committee to hear the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, on his plan for a new central federal bank, today insured a three-cornered finish fight over banking reform.

He will appear Wednesday.

He will urge creation of a bank of the United States, with exclusive control over currency and credit.

His plan calls for popular election of 48 governors, one in each state, to manage the system.

The plan undoubtedly will be rejected by the committee, but will be presented later to the Senate by his friends. Senator Nye (R.) of North Dakota already has introduced it as a separate bill.

The administration previously has sought to increase the power of the Federal Reserve Board over member banks.

This proposed increase has been resisted by Senator Glass (D.) of Virginia, so-called father of the Federal Reserve system, and by conservative eastern bankers.

Love Sail OF ELAINE

Wife in California, Barrymore Goes to South Seas

New York, May 24—Somewhere on the high seas, between here and Havana, Cuba, the "love cruise" yacht, Infanta, belonging to John Barrymore, sails placidly today.

Aboard, in addition to the actor, is 19-year-old Elaine Barrie, her mother, Mrs. Edna Barrie and an unidentified woman.

It is not, however, Mrs. John Barrymore, the former Dolores Costello, for she, so wires indicate, is back in her new California home, to which she moved after being ordered from the Barrymore manage more than a month ago.

The Infanta weighed anchor from Pier 23, Brooklyn, last night amid strains of Rudy Vallee's theme song, "My Time Is Your Time," which John may have been singing to Elaine or vice versa.

Announced as a short cruise of the south seas, this new madcap adventure of the crown prince of stagedom's royal family may have interesting complications.

Complications Due

In addition to almost certain activity in his wife's behalf in California courts, the former stage Beau Brummell faces dissention in managerial circles.

It all began with the preparations for the Rudy Vallee broadcast, at which time Barrymore gave a scene from "Twentieth Century" on the crooner's program, and his leading lady was the novice, Elaine, who up to a few months ago was a student in Hunter College here.

Elaine came into Barrymore's life when he was sick in Doctors Hospital, weary of the plaudits which had greeted him for a score of years and anxious to quit the stage and pass the mantle of his art on to a younger head.

One day he received a fan letter from Elaine, asking to see him and offering to nurse him back to health. The romance which followed was said to have been a secret to even the actor's closest friends.

Elaine Wins

For days before the broadcast, Barrymore was in a constant quarrel with his manager over giving Elaine, who had stage ambitions, equal billing on the Vallee program with the great Barrymore.

Barrymore refused to listen to the man's pleadings, willing to gamble on his name to give the youngster, who had brought him new life, a chance to make good.

Barrymore even went so far as to threaten to tear up his contract with the manager unless Elaine went on the air with him.

Barrymore and Elaine expect to return from the cruise in a month to start rehearsals for John's new play, in which Elaine will be his leading lady.

The newlyweds will pass their honeymoon in Bermuda, and upon their return will make their home at 44 E. 51st street.

COUPLE DIE In Suicide Pact

Paris, May 24 (INS)—The suicide pact of a New York couple was consummated today with the death of Milton Weil, 64, former millinery buyer.

Unable to recoup their fortunes, lost in the 1929 financial collapse, they took poison Wednesday.

Mrs. Weil, 40, died yesterday, and the two-day battle of physicians to save Weil failed today.

100 ROYAL GUESTS

STOCKHOLM GAY AS INGRID, CROWN PRINCE ARE WED

CROWDS CHEER COUPLE

CROWN PRINCE FREDERICK
Military Bridegroom

Three Kings at Rites

Couple Will Spend Honeymoon on Riviera

Stockholm, May 24—With three European kings and more than 100 royal personages looking on, Princess Ingrid of Sweden became the bride of Crown Prince Frederick of Denmark here today.

By her marriage she became the future queen of Denmark.

The ceremony was held in Storkyrkan Cathedral, thirteenth century church where all kings of the Bernadotte lineage in Sweden have been crowned.

Stockholm was gay with flags and bunting as thousands of visitors from the provinces and royalty from all Europe poured into the capital for the wedding.

Before her engagement to Frederick, rumor often linked Ingrid's name with that of the Prince of Wales. She is the daughter of Crown Prince Gustav Adolf of Sweden and the granddaughter of King Gustav V.

Her grandfather was one of the three monarchs at today's Cathedral service. There also were King Christian and Queen Alexandrina of Denmark, parents of the bridegroom, and King Leopold of Belgium. Former Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm of Germany also attended.

'All Sing Psalm

It was a royal wedding, born of tradition, and executed with pomp and splendor, but it had an aura of romance amid the glitter of polished swords.

"I, Ingrid, take you, Frederik, my lawful husband, to love you through sorrow and pleasure, and as a symbol I accept from you this ring."

With these words and the recital of the other vows of the Swedish marriage service, the blue-eyed young woman and the tall, dark-haired, studious, young man were married.

The entire audience, one of the most distinguished ever to gather in Stockholm, joined in the singing of a wedding psalm as Ingrid passed the altar to join the Prince.

PRINCESS INGRID
Bride in White Satin

Archbishop Eidem of Sweden read the wedding service.

"Before God the omniscient," intoned the archbishop, "and in the presence of this gathering, I ask you, Crown Prince Frederik, if you choose this woman, Princess Ingrid, as your lawful wife, to cherish her in both sorrow and happiness."

On Frederik's response, the same question was put to Princess Ingrid.

The wedding ring, a thin band of gold, was then accepted and blessed by the archbishop. In the final repetition of their wedding vows Frederik and Ingrid held the ring together before the crown prince placed it on the hand of his future queen.

Gown of Satin

Ingrid's wedding gown was of white satin. She was attended by the two little daughters of the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Norway and Young Count Wisborg. The girls and the boy wore delphinium blue.

After the wedding, the royal couple drove through Stockholm's broad streets, acknowledging the cheers of the crowds.

Equally impressive, for the public, was the departure for Denmark of the Crown Prince and his bride. With the quays and bridges of the Stockholm harbor thronged with spectators, the newlyweds ceremoniously said farewell to Sweden.

They embarked in the Swedish royal sloop, with its highly ornamented cabin, in something of a gondola effect.

With salutes from harbor crafts, Princess Ingrid took farewell of her father, King Gustaf, and departed in a manner to move the heart of a Hollywood director, for her new land.

The royal sloop proceeded across the harbor to the Danish royal yacht "Dannebrog," which a squadron of Danish torpedo boats was ordered to convoy. Harbor fortress guns boomed out a final farewell.

Tonight Stockholm will continue its festivities with dancing in the parks and an enormous fireworks display in the vicinity of the royal palace.

Their honeymoon will be spent on the Riviera. Returning to Copenhagen they will visit England.

Precautions were taken by police to prevent possible molestation or assassination of the nearly 100 members of European royal families.

Pope Assails Sterilization

By International News Service

Vatican City, May 24—The practice of sterilization, if it continues to spread, will lead the world back to "paganism's horrors," Pope Pius XI, told doctors from 30 nations whom he received in audience today.

After congratulating the doctors, delegates to the international hospital and physicians' congress for postponing discussion of eugenics and sterilization, the pontiff said:

"Such discussions are out of place. Someone has said sterilization is now practiced in Germany and that in a few years it will be done everywhere.

"If this happens serious consequences will follow for the whole world, preparing the return of paganism's horrors, so well described by St. Paul when he said, 'it was a loveless and pitiless society.'"

New Post for Dr. Bigelow

Buffalo, N. Y., May 24 (AP)—Dr. Karl W. Bigelow, professor of economics, formerly at Harvard, today was appointed director of tutorial instruction at the University of Buffalo, effective Sept. 1.

Midinettes Win Strike

Paris, May 24—Paris' embattled midinettes have won their "powder puff" strike and needles will click, sewing machines hum as usual in backroom workshops of the Rue De La Paix's fashion salons today.

The 2000 seamstresses who walked out Monday decided to return to work when the great fashion houses agreed not to give them the proposed 25-cent reduction in weekly salaries whose top was about $12.50, and to abolish piece work.

Red Plots GIRL TELLS COLLEGE PERIL PROBED IN CHICAGO

Co-Ed's Story Heard

By Universal Service

Chicago, May 24—Investigation of alleged Communistic influences in tax-exempt educational institutions will go forward here today, with Lucille Norton, former co-ed at the University of Chicago, as the main witness before a committee of the State Senate.

The investigation was ordered by the Senate after Charles R. Walgreen, drug store head, charged the university is honeycombed with subversive influences and that, for that reason, he had withdrawn his niece, Miss Norton.

Additional evidence of what he terms radical activities at the university will be introduced by Joseph B. Fleming, Walgreen's attorney, it was announced.

Scheduled to be questioned is Professor Frederick L. Schuman, who previously denied Walgreen's charges that he had advocated liberal moral codes.

Laird Bell, attorney for the university, said he may call several other professors to testify in behalf of the institution.

LUCILLE NORTON

ACADEMY To Stage Festival

Students at the Academy of the Assumption, Wellesley Hills, will hold a spring festival tomorrow, instead of their annual field day exercises.

State in 6 WPA Zones

By International News Service.

Washington, May 24—The country was divided today into 307 work districts for administration of the $4,000,000,000 work relief program.

The areas were established on a basis of the number of families on relief in each area; quick and adequate transportation and communication for work projects, and economy and efficiency of central headquarters.

Harry L. Hopkins, progress administrator, made the announcement.

Massachusetts has six districts with headquarters in Salem, Boston (both districts 2 and 3), Brockton, Worcester and Springfield.

$482,600 MORE FOR BAY STATE IN WORK PLAN

By Associated Press

Washington, May 24—NRA planned to ask the Work Relief Administration today to lend $50,000,000 to states to help them develop varied industries behind prison walls in palce of the few lines of manufacturing which now flourish there.

This step was proposed following protests from the cotton garment industry against competition from prison-made goods.

The cotton garment manufacturers, together with private producers of shoes, brooms and some other articles, contend they have to compete with an unfairly large share of the output of prison plants.

Letting convicts produce many different kinds of products is advocated by some who argue that no one branch of private industry would then feel destructive competition from prison.

OTHER PROJECTS SPEEDED

Before receiving the $50,000,000 request from NRA, the applications division of the Work Relief Organization disclosed it had received a new shower of project proposals from other government agencies.

Projects in this list made public today, include:

MASSACHUSETTS

Boston—Addition steel storage building at Navy Yard, $48,000.

Gloucester—New station and building, $60,000.

Lynn—Channel dredging at Lynn Harbor, $279,000.

Nantucket—Quarters building for operator at Surfside, $60,000.

Taunton—Dredging Taunton river, $55,000.

CONNECTICUT

Dredging and regulating works on Connecticut river below Hartford, $530,000.

New London-Norwich—Dredging Thames river, $320,000.

$482,600 IN BAY STATE

The new applications sought approximately $25,000,000 of work relief money for work contemplated by the war and navy departments, the public health service and the veterans' administration in 23 states, Alaska, Hawaii and the District of Columbia.

They brought to nearly $100,000,000 the total asked by government departments in a week.

The public health service requested $2,480,000 to seal abandoned coal mines.

The War Department asked funds for army posts and rivers and harbors.

NAVY YARD WORKS

Considerable construction at naval bases was proposed and the list included one construction request from the Veterans' Administration.

Meanwhile, with the Work Relief program not yet advanced to the point of actually swinging the dole titute from doles to jobs, the government prepared to make $140,000,000 of the fund available for continuing relief activities.

The Works Allotment Board recommended that President Roosevelt turn over this sum speedily to FERA.

It also recommended a small number of federal projects, including $8,610,600 for repairs to navy yards and docks, and $250,000 to the Agriculture Department for warfare on the Dutch elm disease.

Father of 5 Drowns in Sea

Five Roxbury children were fatherless today as coast guards sought the body of John Landers of Louise park, Roxbury, off Graves Light.

Landers was drowned yesterday after toppling from a motor boat in which he and three companions had gone down the harbor to fish.

The party had started back for Boston when Landers went overboard. The motor boat was 40 feet away before he was missed, and by the time the boat had put about he had disappeared.

A distress signal was hoisted and the three others were picked up by the coast guard. One of the men, in the excitement, had stepped on the gasoline feed line and snapped it.

With Landers were John Lentine of Marginal street, East Boston; Edward Bullard of Russell street, Charlestown, and Stephen Bruno of Melbourne street, Dorchester.

Honor 7 Students

Gordon McKay Scholarships for study in the Harvard Engineering School were warded to seven Greater Boston students, it was announced today.

DEDHAM TO RENO

End of Marital Trail For Socialite Pair

He Was Cruel, She Says

MRS. VAN NESS HOW BATES

Her Wedding a Brilliant Social Event

Van Ness How Bates, Boston socialite, who achieved no small measure of fame in the last decade by the unique bills he sponsored in the Legislature, was divorced today.

Dispatches from Reno told that Mrs. Elinor Hunt Baker Bates, former Dedham debutante had won a decree on grounds of cruelty.

The couple were married five years ago in a brilliant society ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ross W. Baker.

Among other things, Bates was the sponsor of a bill to investigate Harvard, in 1925. He proposed to have a special investigating committee find out if Harvard was doing a good job in dispensing learning to its students.

That bill was killed in committee and so were about 16 other measures that Bates urged. Most of them related to bridges over the Charles River.

Because of his constant appearances before legislative committees Bates became a target for senators and representatives who called his proposals "nut bills."

He had been an examiner for the state civil service, but amid the storm of criticism on the way he spent his time, he resigned.

Bates is a Harvard graduate and saw service in the World War as a naval officer. His ex-wife attended the exclusive Miss May's School.

CONCORD PIKE To Open June 1

Cambridge and Concord will be linked by a new four-lane pike on June 1, it was announced today. It is estimated that roughly 300,000 cars a day will use the road.

Special efforts to have the highway open in time for the early summer travel have advanced the opening date from the middle of June to the first.

BOSTON FIRM Wins Dredge Job

Washington, May 24 (AP)—The War Department today awarded a contract for dredging Saco river and York harbor, Me., to the Bay State Dredging & Construction Co., East Boston, Mass., for $40,370.37.

LYNN INFANT RESCUED BY FIREMEN

A mother's cry for her baby sent a hero-fireman into a blazing Lynn home on Washington street at dawn today.

Fireman Archie Keating heard the cry.

Through smoke-filled corridors he fought his way to the parlor where the year-and-a-half-old child was sleeping in his crib.

Nearby woodwork and furniture were blazing.

Snatching the child up and covering it with clothes from the crib, the brave fire laddie retraced the smoky path to the street and safety.

The baby was unhurt.

Aroused by the smell of smoke, Francis Bellevue, Sr., aroused his wife, Eleanor. In a panic, police said, they fled to the street.

But as soon as they reached outside, the mother remembered the child.

She fought to re-enter the home, but policemen held her back.

When Fireman Keating returned the child to her arms, she swooned.

Fire was believed to have started from a cigarette butt dropped into a stuffed chair in the parlor.

Damage was not estimated.

PRESS STRIKE Near Settlement

STEEL LEADERS SEE NEW PEAK FOR BUSINESS

By LOU WEDEMAR
(Copyright, 1935, Universal Service)

New York, May 24—Prosperity is returning to America, and will reach peaks as high or higher than those of the past if "economic experiments" don't interfere.

That is the gist of a nation-wide symposium business survey by the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Thomas M. Girdler, head of Republic Steel, painted a glowing picture of the steel industry's future, bringing his auditors nearly out of their chairs by declaring:

"In many respects the outlook for business in general, as well as for steel, is considerably better today than it has been for a number of years."

Charles M. Schwab, who has been optimistic before, gave additional weight to his declaration of improved conditions by saying:

"My optimism is more than just a general feeling of hopefulness. It is based on the fact that I have seen the trend always improving."

HARD WORK CALLED CURE

David A. Reed, former Republican United States senator from Pennsylvania, declared economic recovery has come most rapidly in those countries "which have seen the futility of trying to legislate prosperity." The depression, he said, can be solved only by hard work and thrift.

Before the steel kings began their series of optimistic statements, Professor Irving Fisher, of Yale, economist whose opinions are highly regarded by the business men of the nation, declared in an address in San Antonio, Tex.

"The growing conviction that the depression is nearing its end is justified. Our trouble is not too much goods but too little money to buy them with."

STRONG UP-SWING

Analyses from Washington also aided the steel men in their declarations of improvement, for the Department of Commerce surveys reported "a continued, strong upswing."

Charles B. Gay, new president of the New York Stock Exchange, declared:

"In my judgment the country has passed well through the vale if adversity and is now on the road to recovery."

In rapid-fire succession, leaders attending the Steel Institute proceedings added to the first substantial pronouncement of returned prosperity.

Here is what they said:

H. E. SHELDON, president of Allegheny Steel:

"We are now employing practically as many men as at the peak of 1929."

H. G. BATCHELDER, president of Ludlum Steel:

"The built-up potential demand for steel can hardly be over-estimated."

L. E. GEOGHAN, vice-president of Gulf States Steel:

"We are hopeful of a much improved condition in the next few months."

ARTHUR RODER, Colorado Fuel and Iron Co.:

"We are reaching the end of economic turmoil."

L. E. BLOCK chairman, Inland Steel:

"Pent-up demands should stimulate a healthy flow of business."

L. W. HOLLOWAY, Wheeling Steel:

"The steel code should be continued two years."

G. M. LAUGHLIN, JR., Jones & Laughlin:

"Our management views the present situation with some degree of optimism."

"WINTER" OVER It's Warming Up

Get out the straw hat! Wnter weather is nearly over.

After a month in which the temperature has only once reached 70 degrees, the weatherman at last promised warmer weather for the week-end.

The cold spell brought frosts in isolated places north of Boston early today.

SOUL AND BODY Science Text

"Soul and Body" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday.

The Golden Text is: "My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God" (Psalms 84:2).

SOVIET TROOP Report Stirs Poland

Warsaw, May 24 (INS)—Alarming reports that the Soviets were evacuating civilians from the Russo-Polish border zones and concentrating troops there reached Warsaw today.

Polish officials showed grave concern and launched a thorough investigation.

CAROL TO VISIT Bessarabia June 1

Bucharest, May 24 (AP)—King Carol will make a four-day state visit to the Bessarabian area of his realm beginning June 1.

It will be the first time a Rumanian sovereign has set foot in the former Russian province which has a population of 2,000,000.

Carol will later make a state visit to France.

This Is Life
By ROBERT E. ROGERS

The only adequate reason I can think of for not hanging John Reed's portrait in Adams House, on the site of the rooms he lived in during his undergraduate days, is that it doesn't seem to be a very good likeness.

I have only seen a photographic reproduction but it was perfectly clear, and, quite apart from the artistic value of the work, its color and all, I can only repeat that it doesn't look very much like Reed.

Robert E. Rogers

Robert Hallowell, the painter, was for years one of his intimate friends, but the painting, of course, had to be done from a photograph and I have never seen a portrait made from a photograph that was any good.

The official Technology portrait of former President Richard C. Maclaurin, painted after his death, is curiously unlifelike.

Hallowell, by the way, is the New York painter who recently staged a one-man show here in Boston, advertising that any buyer's bid would take the picture. I saw no mention of even an upset price.

In college Hallowell was about the best artist the Lampoon had ever had. Those were its respectable days. Later he became the first business manager of the New Republic, a job which he presently deserted to become what Mayor Hylan once called an "art artist."

Although I used to know Hallowell well, I still do not think it is a good likeness. It apparently belongs to the rough-and-ready school of portraiture.

That effect is enhanced by the rough trench coat and Russian fur cap, probably characteristic of his latter days in Russia, but strange enough to us who remember him over here.

He was tall and powerful in build, cheaty and swaggering, and he loved well-fitting light clothes and broad-brimmed pajamas and that sort of thing.

Sad and Tired

Even worse, the portrait is obviously one of a man who is ill and sad and tired. There is no laughter in the eyes and mouth, and Reed was always laughing. It is the portrait of a man who seems disillusioned about what he had got into. It is by no means the portrait of a happy and enthusiastic Communist enjoying Utopia.

In connection with this remark, I was glad to note that Ham Fish, of the same class in college, said what I have always maintained:

"I am one of those inclined to believe that Jack Reed before his death was disillusioned over Communism and was ready to repudiate it."

A writer whom I have quoted in this column, who saw him in his last illness, has asserted that Reed told him that Russia was a prison and that he was longing to escape.

Another friend of his, Albert Parry, author of "Garrets and Pretenders" (Covici Friede, 1933), a fascinating study of American Bohemians and their ways, wrote as follows:

"One wonders whether it was not quite fortunate for his career that he died when he did. Would his exceedingly restless nature have stood the monotonous rigors of the five-year plan in Russia and the just as monotonous failure of the Union Square Communists to arouse the American masses? Was there not the danger of his lapsing from his glorious days in Russia to his old, ineffectual Bohemianism?"

I have always thought so. The young Communists who never knew him and who have set up a kind of romantic effigy to whom they can sing "John Reed, Our Captain," will disagree. But I knew him intimately and I am sure that Parry's judgment is psychologically sound.

There is likely to be no protest, I think. Even Ham Fish, the heresy hunter, is not inclined to stir up trouble. The corporation has accepted the portrait. The master of Adams House has no objection.

The portraits of Sam Adams, may, indeed, have a certain secret sympathy for a minority rebel who took his chances for something he believed in. Unless some feather-headed Harvard undergraduates try to make a stink, the proceedings will probably be reasonably decorous and no harm done. With the names of German students on a tablet on the walls of the Harvard Memorial Chapel a precedent has been established for a certain tolerance within the boundaries of Harvard College.

Some of the sponsors are old friends of his own age. Hallowell, the painter, is one; Lee Simonson, scene designer and one of the proprietors of the Theater Guild, another, and the third, Edward Eyre Hunt, who has ever since the days in Belgium been close to Herbert Hoover. They might be called liberals in the very wide fashion of that term nowadays.

The two youngsters, Corliss Lamont and Granville Hicks, who never knew him, are of a redder stripe. Robert Morss Lovett is an elderly and recognized liberal. Roger Baldwin of the Civil Liberties Union another.

And Heywood Broun, the perpetual adolescent, whose finger like Jack Horner's is in every pie, completes a list which even the most captious and suspicious cannot call very dangerous. None of them is a man of action. All of them are Harvard men and most of them were good friends of the man whose destiny it was to be remembered.

HIGH COURT'S 'TEMPER' CITED

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 24—In the "temper" of the U. S. Supreme Court, Dr. Thomas Reed Powell, Harvard Law School professor, sees the only real threat to President Roosevelt's social security program.

The Constitution itself offers no barrier, he said in addressing a conference on the Constitution at the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

If social legislation is "thwarted by a majority of the Supreme Court," he declared, "the underlying reason can be only that such a majority is so adverse to the use of legislative power to promote what we loosely call social security that they are ready, by however narrow a vote to set their judgement and their will against those of the legislative branches of the state and nation.

"They may prattle about the dictates of the Constitution, but the only coercion to which they can be subject is the coercion of their own understanding, their own outlook and their own temper."

Traffic Charges

The Legislature today has under consideration a bill to allow the Boston Traffic Commission to charge a minimum of 50 cents a foot per year for curb space used in loading and unloading trucks of merchandise.

A Poppy for the Governor

(Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer)

The Veterans of Foreign Wars solicited the aid of Harriet Hilliard, radio singer, in starting preliminary work on its annual Poppy Day doings. She sold the first poppy to Governor Curley at the State House, yesterday. Poppy Day is set for Saturday. THREE SOLOMON CHARGES OUT

With the defense under way, trial of John J. Moore of Brighton continued today on only two of five original charges—those of murder and robbery of Charles "King" Solomon, racket leader.

On three charges—that Moore was an accessory in one case before the murder and in two cases before the robbery—directed verdicts of not guilty were ordered by Judge Vincent Brogna, presiding at the locked-up jury session in Suffolk court.

Judge Brogna denied motions for directed verdicts in the major charges.

Martha Lee Gives Some New Strawberry Recipes

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

Many people do not know how to use strawberries after they have made strawberry shortcake. If that is as far as you have gone, there is a whole new field of delightful recipes open before you. Strawberry Cream Pie with a delicious, delicate, fluffy strawberry meringue; Strawberry Chiffon Pie, Tarts, Bavarian, and a new type of shortcake which we made at the Cooking School this week.

We shall be very glad to send you a copy of the recipes, on request.

Also included on this sheet are recipes for jam and jelly making, which we highly recommend so that some of the flavor and color of these delicious berries can be captured to use later in many ways.

NATIVES SOON

Although the native supply of strawberries is not yet on the market, they will be appearing in a few weeks. Those on the market are still inexpensively priced—pint box 12½-15c, quart boxs 25-30c. Also seen on the counters are large, red, fresh cherries, expensively priced at the present time, 30-45c a pound.

Citrus fruits are excellent and we still have bananas, selling at the very low price of four pounds for 17c, to use in healthy nourishing dishes.

There is a wide choice among the vegetables. Asparagus, which can be prepared and served in many attractive ways, is selling for as low as 10c a bunch for the native. These are the small thin stalks. The large shipped-in asparagus is selling at 25-30c. New potatoes are high in price; a delightful way of serving them is cooked and combined with fresh peas. Peas are exceptionally good at the present time, selling for as low as 5c a pound. Rhubarb is retailing for a few cents a pound—3 lbs. selling for 10c, and is an excellent suggestion not only for use now, but to preserve in jams and conserves.

BEEF STILL HIGH

Beef is still high priced, but don't forget that we are paying more for meat these days because of the drouth of last year. The extra money which is being spent for beef is going to the farmers, who for years, have been struggling to make a living.

Lamb is still the most economical buy on the meat lists, with leg of veal second. Chicken and broilers are a good suggestion for the party meal.

If meat prices are too high, turn to fish as the ideal substitute. It is the same type of food as meat; that is, it has protein value, and there are many inexpensive choices—mackerel at 8-10c, halibut 19-23c, haddock 5c a pound, and cod at 7-8c.

RHUBARB JAM

4 cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit
7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar
1 bottle commercial pectin

To prepare the fruit, slice fine or chop about 2 pounds of rhubarb. Do not peel. Red-stalked rhubarb gives the best color. If desired, add 1 teaspoon of ginger to measured rhubarb.

Measure the sugar into large kettle. Add prepared fruit, flooding each solidly packed cup with water. Mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over the hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 3 minutes. Remove from fire and stir in the pectin. Skim and pour quickly. Paraffin and cover. Makes about 11 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

RHUBARB CONSERVE

4 pounds rhubarb
5 pounds sugar
1 pound seeded raisins
2 oranges
1 lemon

Wash and peel stalks of rhubarb and cut in one-inch pieces. Put in kettle, sprinkle with sugar and add raisins and grated rind and juice of oranges and lemon. Mix, cover and let stand one-half hour. Place on range, bring to boiling-point and let simmer 45 minutes, stirring almost constantly. Fill the jelly glasses with mixture, cool, and paraffin.

CITIES RELIEF ACTION URGED

Through the various heads of federal relief agencies in the state, Frank H. Foy, Massachusetts director for the National Emergency Council, appealed for "action" today by cities and towns.

Director Foy urged that municipalities immediately file their plans for new projects to be undertaken with federal aid.

He pointed out that such applications carry no binding obligation on the part of the city or town.

Unless both sides—the government and the municipality—agree, he said, such applications may be withdrawn.

So far towns have by far taken greater advantage of the federal relief, Foy asserted, and cities have lagged in submitting plans.

Director Foy met with Arthur G. Rotch, ERA and WPA administrator; Theodore B. Parker, PWA administrator; John F. Malley, PHA administrator, and other Federal officials.

BUSINESS AIDS, ROOSEVELT ROW BREWS

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Washington, May 24—Violent political battle is brewing between President Roosevelt and his business advisory council, which includes the foremost figures in the financial and business life of the country.

The council is composed of 50 financiers, manufacturers and commercial business leaders.

They were requested by Secretary of Commerce Roper to consult and advise with the Roosevelt administration in its relationship with the business interests of the nation during the serious period of economy recovery.

They complain that their official reports critical of New Deal policies have been deliberately withheld from the American people and they have been made the victims of practical White House politics.

LEADERS IN NATION

Among the conspicuous members of the council are:

Gerard Swope, president of General Electric; Walter C. Teagle, president of Standard Oil of New Jersey; Myron C. Taylor, chairman of United States Steel; Thomas H. McInnerney, president of National Dairy Products Corporation; Walter S. Gifford, president of American Telephone and Telegraph Company; Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank.

Among the specific complaints are:

That the council has made official reports to the administration condemning the central bank act, the Wagner trades dispute act and troublesome features of NRA and that these reports have been suppressed from publication.

That the only one of its reports made public by the administration was on the vast social security act and that this was misrepresented by the administration to be a blanket indorsement of the program.

That the White House has represented these business men as being violently opposed to the attacks made upon New Deal policies by the United States Chamber of Commerce whereas the council's reports were quite similar to the Chamber's resolutions of denunciation.

REPORT HELD UP

The council completed its report on the economic security legislation on April 10.

The report was not made public until May 16, or 12 days after President Roosevelt had publicly attacked the United States Chamber of Commerce as "misrepresenting" the real business sentiment of the country.

Even then the report was said by the government propagandists to express "complete symphy for the objectives sought in the President's pending social legislation."

On the contrary, the report declared that the pending legislation offers no incentive to employes to provide steady employment for their workers, that it failed to assess the workers for their share of social insurance and that it provided enormous taxes on payrolls which private employers could not possibly assume at this time.

Home Is Best, Wandering Girl Decides

While police sought her throughout the West End, where she disappeared after leaving a bus from New York, Laura Pally, 14, walked into her home in Windsor street, Cambridge, today. Her runaway trip to New York and prospects of a job as waitress in Boston didn't look so good as home and mother's arms after all, Laura admitted. Here she is being welcomed by her mother, Mrs. Bessie Pally. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

GIRL, 14, HOME AT LAST

Cambridge Runaway Eager to Return After New York Bus Adventure

Just a little home girl, homesick, Laura Pally, 14, returned to her parents and her five brothers and sisters at 356 Windsor street, Cambridge, today.

When she walked into the house, glad to be home again after a runaway adventure, police and postoffice inspectors were conducting a widespread search for her, fearing she had been kidnaped.

Laura ran away Wednesday night, taking a bus to New York. She said she remained there three hours, before sending a telegram home that she was returning on the next bus, homesick.

But for a traffic jam that delayed her older brother, on his way to meet her at the bus terminal, Laura would have been home last night, she said.

Her brother was 15 minutes late arriving and learned from a bus driver that Laura had left with a blonde girl passenger.

Subsequently, Laura sent another telegram home, saying she had changed her mind and would not arrive.

"I met this girl on the bus," said Laura. "She was about 19. Her name was Mary and she was a waitress in New York, but her somewhere near Harrison avenue.

"She told me she could get me a job and I went home with her and met her parents. We also visited another girl and I stayed at Mary's house last night. Then we decided I better go home."

Postoffice inspectors had intercepted a letter mailed by Laura in the West End, saying she was going to get a job as a waitress and would send money home.

Her parents, Israel and Bessie Pally, have been ill.

State House Briefs

A resolution calling for an investigation by the state insurance commissioner into the subject of instalment payments for premiums under the compulsory automobile liability insurance law was given a third reading today in the Senate.

Officials of a loan company continued their efforts at a hearing today before the House ways and means committee to have favorably reported a bill which would put industrial banking institutions, such as the Morris Plan, under the supervision of the commissioner of banks with the right to "do the business of a banking company."

With four Republicans dissenting, the House committee on rules today reported adversely on the order of Representative Christian A. Herter of Boston for appointment of a special committee to complete the investigation of the East Boston tunnel land takings.

A unanimous adverse report has been made today by the rules committee on Representative Roland D. Sawyer's bill for a special committee to investigate the acts of the Boston Finance Commission since September 11, 1931.

SLAIN BRIDE'S ACTS BARED

By Associated Press

New York, May 24—The trial of Joseph L. Steinmetz, 22-year-old Brooklyn divinity student, for the murder of his 17-year-old bride, Ruth, adjourned today until Monday following failure of the state to prove he had been forced to marry the girl he is accused of killing.

Judge Charles C. Nott ruled out most of the testimony of the slain bride's father, Samuel Armstrong. He testified Steinmetz had asked his consent to the marriage, which was refused.

Assistant District Attorney Kaminsky questioned the father regarding reported relations between his daughter and Steinmetz prior to their marriage.

He questioned him particularly about Ruth's having spent the night before her marriage in Steinmetz's bungalow in Los Angeles.

Kaminsky said testimony of the father would prove Steinmetz could not plead irresponsibility because of alcohol for slaying his wife and the Rev. Joseph J. Leonard in the Knights of Columbus Hotel November 26.

LIFE IN BLOOD DRIP

By International News Service

London, May 24—A new and revolutionary method of transfusion by which relatively large quantities of blood can be given has been developed by two doctors of Middlesex Hospital, here.

The success of the experiment, which is known as the "continuous drip" method, was revealed by the pair in an article in the "Lancet," British medical magazine.

A patient dangerously ill with anemia received nearly 10 pints of healthy blood through the new method, and recovered.

Hitherto it has been held impossible to give large quantities of blood at one transfusion. The amount injected into a patient's veins is usually only about a pint.

In the "continuous drip" method, contributions of blood are collected from a number of suitable donors and are mixed before use.

A glass reservoir containing the mixed blood hangs at the head of the bed. Oxygen is bubbled through this to keep it fresh.

Blood flows through a long rubber tube into a patient's arm at the rate of about 40 drops a minute—or a pint in four hours.

The supply of blood in this way has been continued as long as 51½ hours without harm or discomfort.

At the end of this time the change in condition was so great that it was possible to perform a vital operation with success.

The inventors of the new device have performed 17 large "drip transfusions." They believe there are many diseases in which a liberal supply of blood will mean the difference between life and death.

Amherst Hits Dartmouth as Girls' School

By Associated Press

Amherst, May 24—Dartmouth seniors, who today received "an invitation to tea" from Harvard, which they named as "their favorite woman's college," rate pretty well in that line themselves in the opinion of Amherst seniors. The Lord Jeffs picked the Green as "third best girls' school."

The poll disclosed also that milk was preferred to Scotch as a beverage and the Bible to "textbooks or other light fiction."

All but 12 of the 102 students who answered the question said they would not volunteer if the United States entered another war.

AWNING SHROUD TRACED IN 3 MURDERS

Tracing the awning used as a shroud in the Vermont triple murder mystery was narrowed down to two Vermont stores today.

According to Charles W. Gately, manager of a Charlestown awning manufacturing concern, who identified the awning as one made by his company, there were only two awnings with the particular type pulley shipped into Vermont.

One was sent to a store in Vergennes, 14 miles from Middlebury, where the three skeletons were found, and the other was consigned to a store in Bristol, 10 miles from Middlebury.

Both awnings were shipped in 1931, in which year, Gately said, his firm bought a job lot of pulleys from the Astrup Manufacturing Company of Cleveland.

The pulleys on the awning shroud were of the type used by the Charlestown company only in that year.

MYSTERY MAN SOUGHT

The stores remained open for a year, but when they closed, it is understood, the awnings were allowed to stay in place.

State's Attorney John Conley of Vermont, in charge of the investigation, sought to learn today what had become of the awnings.

Conley is attempting to trace a man of apparent wealth who, in 1933 or 1934, stayed at a Bristol, Vt., hotel for a few days and then bought a house for cash.

Soon afterward, he painted the lower window panes white, blocking vision into the interior.

He told Bristol residents he was bringing his family on, but one day he suddenly appeared at a garage and offered his expensive car for sale.

THEN HE VANISHED

The garage proprietor jokingly said, "I'll give you $100 for it." The mystery man is reported to have said, "I'll give it to you for $100 if you'll drive me to Middlebury to catch a train."

When the garage man pointed out that there was no train due for some time, the stranger said: "Never mind the train, get s to Middlebury. I want to get out of here."

The garage man bought the car for $100 and drove the man to Middlebury. There he vanished.

Proposed check of the lists of missing persons in all principal cities of the country and an appeal for Department of Justice aid also featured attempts today to identify the three murder victims.

The proposal to ask federal aid came when Vermont officials gave credence to a growing theory that the victims had been transported from some distance, possibly by hired killers.

So far little has been accomplished by the broadcast of photographs and descriptions of the dental work found in the mouth of one of the children, but officials were far from discouraged.

Lieutenant-Inspector James A. Dorsey of Boston police, who is tracing down a former Newton family on the chance that they may have been the victims, was still in New York state.

Chain Letter Dollars Gone, Hold Carrier

By Universal Service

New York, May 24—On a charge of stealing $1 from a decoy chain letter, Joseph Fox, veteran letter carrier in Jamaica, Queens, was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Epstein, in Brooklyn.

Postal investigators said they had found Fox was making regular stops at a gasoline filling station in Richmond Hill. They alleged they posted decoy letters, with marked $1 bills, to addresses along his route, and, after watching the carrier halt at the filling station, found opened envelopes on the washroom floor.

Fox was held in $1000 bail for the federal grand jury.

SHIP STRIKERS Ask U. S. to Act

Camden, N. J., May 24 (AP)—New York Shipbuilding Company strikers have asked the government to force a "fair and equitable" settlement of the strike.

Resolutions urging the government to "use its powers in naval contracts" with the company were adopted at a mass meeting.

Forty-six hundred workers are idle in the walkout.

PARLEY TO STOP NAZI AIR PLAN

By International News Service

London, May 24—Startled by word from Berlin that Germany will have 2000 war planes by the end of this year, while Britain's program calls for only 1500 home defense planes within two years, the government today initiated steps for a four-power arms conference, to which Chancellor Hitler would be invited.

Britain stands ready to make further increases, but prefers limitations of air fleets, and has been promised the co-operation of Air Minister Goering and Hitler.

Germany, it was learned, has informed Britain that the 2000 planes are needed for air parity with France.

The Reich, however, is willing to cut the figure if France does likewise, and Britain slows up building, so the three nations have air parity.

A conference among Germany, Italy, France and Britain is expected to be the first diplomatic action taken when Stanley Baldwin succeeds Ramsay MacDonald as prime minister.

ESTHONIAN BORDER TOWNS HAVE OLD RUSSIAN COLOR

(The "joy of living" in an Esthonian market town is graphically described by H. R. Knickerbocker in another article of his series comparing Baltic capitalism with Soviet Communism.)

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

(Copyright 1935, by International News Service)

Petseri, Esthonia, May 24—In the "Black Cat" restaurant a young man sat at a table and yodelled to himself. Two bearded peasants expostulated. Another staggered out dragging one completely paralyzed.

In the room at the right a chorus bawled Esthonian words to the old German tune, "Trink, Trink, Bruederlein Trink!" A strong smell of sheepskin, vodka, and cabbage soup saturated the room.

It was only noon but the bi-monthly market in Petseri, down in the southeast corner of Esthonia next to the Russian border, was well under way. They told me Petseri was the poorest place in Esthonia. In this district was one of the first capitals of Rurik's Russia. Peasants here lived now like they did half a century ago in Russia. It would make a good place to draw comparisons with new Russia.

A Setu woman in a cream colored heavy woolen skirt and countless petticoats walked noiselessly by, looking for her man and smiling ironically. Setus are a tribe neither Russian nor Esthonian. They live to themselves, work hard, save and do well. The others call them "peasant Jews."

PIG IN SACK

Over in a corner an accordion player, born blind, pumped out a rousing Russian tune. Pushing through the throng a peasant grabbed a chair and shoved a sack under it. Out of the sack came the frantic squeals of a pig.

A girl behind the counter served vodka in large tumblers at six American cents a tumbler. She kept sending out to the kitchen for more. It did look like old Russia.

Outside the market was going strong. Throngs of peasants paraded up and down between rows of booths and wagons while vendors barked their wares: Bread, meat, eggs and fish, home-made spinning wheels, hand-forged knives, firkins and tubs and barrels, baskets and mats, second-hand clothing and new-made boots, harness and caps and toys and ribbons, wealth galore. Here was free trade, capitalist trade, and what a lot of life there was in it.

ACROSS BORDER

Just across the border was Soviet Russia. Airplanes reminded us of it. They soared above our heads and the peasants gawked and marvelled. Soldiers reminded us of it. They whipped by in sleighs drawn by fast horses, and each had a rifle strapped to his back. Today they held a small air manoeuver in Petseri to keep their hand in on the Soviet border.

Right over that border and from there all the way to the sea of Japan there is not to be found today another market like this one. True they have markets in the Soviet Union, but the life and the glamour are gone out of them. For all trade in the Soviet Union is state trade, all manufacturing, even of artisan's handwork, is organized into trusts, syndicates, cartels. Nobody works for himself. Everybody works for the state.

This is indeed a poor part of Esthonia. A poor place for any country. But what a riotously good time they seemed to have. The sober ones swapped horses. For $6 you could buy a horse. Shouts of laughter went up when the seller said the horse was four years old. "Fourteen," the audience bellowed.

PIG FOR $3.00

A big pig you could have for $3.00, and a two-weeks old calf for $2.00. One merchant specialized in "hope chests" for brides. Handmade, hand-painted like the backdrop in a Russian ballet, they sold for $5.00 each.

Scores of peasants jammed into the "Buffet Fire Department," where for the equivalent of ten American cents they wolfed a lunch of cabbage soup, roast pork, and onions, white bread and butter, cucumber salad and tea. Large crowds stood around and debated whether ten kronen, about $2.50, was too much for a pair of knee high leather boots good for five years' wear.

Everybody ate heartily, including the revoltingly deformed beggar who had been panhandling at the gate of the old Russian monastery and was now drinking soup out of a basin, disdaining the spoon. A gramophone played to a open-mouthed group and a fish-monger with a basket yelled he was selling out his prime herring for ten Esthonian cents a kilogram, or about one American cent a pound.

BLEAK VILLAGE

Out of this bedlam we jumped in a sleigh and drove to the village of Ragosina, inhabited by Russians. It lay bleak and mournful in a desolate landscape of unbroken snow. Middle in the village was a poor little house. Middle in the house was a bed and on it lay Mihail Krupenin, head of the family. Three daughters, 20, 18 and 16 years old, blushed and listened. They were pretty. The 21-year-old son sullenly listened. The mother talked.

They had 3½ acres of land, two cows, one horse, two pigs, 10 chickens and one sheep. They lived poorly, but got enough to eat by consuming everything the farm produced. The old man got a pension of 30 kronen, about $7 a month. Otherwise they couldn't get along. Everybody in the village had an outside job. Nobody could live on that little land.

Half an hour away in the Setu village of Liapa, Semin Umbiaya, with four in the family and 15 acres of land, was better off, but not much. Ten of his acres were forest and not good for much. He had one cow, one calf, one pig, one sheep, seven chickens, and would buy a horse in the spring. They had potatoes and bread for breakfast today; salt pork, potatoes and milk for lunch; cabbage soup and bread for dinner. No butter.

Their low-ceilinged room was untidy. The 15-year-old daughter had never seen a movie. The mother could not read.

BETTER OFF

Still better off was Pavel Luik in the next village, Golovina. Luik was bare-footed, and a child's bare footprints showed in the snow on the porch. There were seven in the family, and 28 acres of land, but only five cultivated, but there were three cows, one horse, one pig, two sheep and eight chickens.

There were no rugs on the floor, and the furniture was a table, several benches and beds. They ate potato soup, roast salt pork and bread for breakfast, roast salt pork and bread for dinner, mush and milk for supper. Mother and sister could not read, but father and son could. They got a Reval newspaper three times weekly, but had no radio and never went to a movie as it was too far and too expensive.

"Why do you let your little two-year-old son go barefoot in this weather," I asked Luik, an agreeable man. "Won't hurt him. He's used to it," he replied.

Luik thought he was probably better off than most of the farmers around here. "Cause I don't drink," he said.

On the way home we met the last market crowd waving bottles from their sleighs in the dusk. Songs drifted drunkenly across the waste, and stolid Setu women held their wandering upright with one hand while they drove with the other.

In the Hotel Aristide Briand, where we got our bag, the landlady offered us full board and room for 75 American cents a day if we would stay by the week.

A WORD TO THE WIVES IS SUFFICIENT

The meals you serve help keep the family fit. In many homes, common constipation develops as a result of insufficient "bulk" in the menus. This can be overcome by a delicious cereal.

Research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" in convenient form. ALL-BRAN also provides vitamin B and iron.

How much better it is to eat this gentle natural food than to risk taking patent medicines. Continued use does not lower its effectiveness. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved, see your doctor.

Serve as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in cooking. Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Newton Boy 'Brings'Em Back Alive' With Buck

Weird jungle cries shatter the West Newton stillness these clear spring nights. Raucous shrieks of tropical birds pierce the dark.

But lads passersby need have no fear that the Newtons are reverting to primeval wilderness.

If the jungle noises sound authentic it is merely because the birds and beasts which make them have just been transplanted from Africa by a young Newton High School graduate.

Leslie G. Barton, 22-year-old explorer, is back in his Kempton place, home after touring darkest Africa with Warren E. Buck.

He brought back the oddest collection of animals the Newtons have ever seen.

Besides Barton's own pet monkey, Houcher, are four blue-faced monkeys and one of the dog-faced variety, which he distributed among his friends.

Then there were five African siskins, an odd tropical bird, and four Nigerian snails.

More startling in appearance is the devil dog mask which Barton obtained from a voodoo witch doctor.

The youth, son of John K. Barton, armorer in the West Newton armory, met Buck in Africa.

The explorer, brother of Frank "Bring 'Em Back Alive" Buck, took him on a 300-mile trip deep into the jungle, trapping African animals and snakes.

"THEY DON'T GET YOUR WIND" ATHLETES SAY

LOU GEHRIG, home-run star of the New York Yankees, has played in more than 1500 big league games without a single "day off." There's a record the boys will be shooting at for years to come. Such an athletic achievement takes "wind"—healthy nerves—"condition" that can't be laughed off. Lou says: "For steady smoking I pick Camels. They're so mild they never get my 'wind' or my nerves."

So mild, athletes smoke as many as they please—and that's real mildness!

Of course you want mildness in a cigarette. And the athletes—to whom "wind," healthy nerves, "condition" are vitally important—these men and women insist on mildness. Not just a mild taste—but mildness in fact.

Lou Gehrig comes to bat with this interesting statement: "For steady smoking I choose Camels. Why? Because Camels are so mild they never get my 'wind.' And I ought to know. I haven't missed a ball game with the Yanks since 1925."

Other stars noted for their "condition" agree. George Barker, intercollegiate cross-country champion, says: "Camels are so mild, they don't cut my 'wind' in any way." Bobby Walthour, Jr., star of the six-day bike grinds, says: "I've got to have 'wind' in bike racing. For my cigarette I long ago chose Camels."

And golf? Here's Tommy Armour speaking: "Camels never bother my nerves... never shorten my 'wind.'" Tennis? Listen to Bruce Barnes: "Camels never interfere with my 'wind.'" And fancy-diving champion, Betty Bailey, says: "I must protect my 'wind.' That's why I smoke Camels."

What does this kind of mildness mean to you?

It means you can smoke as many Camels as you please. Athletes say Camel's costlier tobaccos never disturb your nerves—never tire your taste—never get your "wind."

GOOD NEWS!

Most of the pleasant things in life are doubly pleasant when you're "in condition"—most of the difficult things just half as annoying. That's why it's such good news to hear that Camel's costlier tobaccos are so mild you can smoke as many as you please. Athletes say Camels never affect your nerves—never get your "wind."

SO MILD YOU CAN SMOKE ALL YOU WANT!

U. S. PORTRAIT GALLERY ASKED BY WALSH

By Universal Service

Washington, May 24—The men and women who made the United States, the great sharp personalities that cut a nation out of a wilderness, before long may be looking down on an admiring world from canvases and statuary in a national portrait gallery in Washington.

Senator David I. Walsh (D.), of Massachusetts, has just introduced in Congress a resolution asking for the creation of "a suitable institution in which could be displayed the portraits, miniatures, sculptures and other like works of art dealing with the men and women who have been notable or may be notable in the history of the United States."

ARTISTS FOR PLAN

Other countries have national portrait galleries. The British Empire in a fine building on Trafalgar square in London, shows proudly the likenesses of the people who have built her vast empire.

The United States should have a suitable building to display the likenesses of its great in the opinion of national critics and historians.

Edward Bruce, an artist of distinction and director of the successful public works of art project, said:

"There is desperate need for a national portrait gallery in Washington. Washington some day will become the art center of the world. I believe that it will. Such a gallery will be an excellent way to speed the national capital on to its proper goal."

Mr. C. Powell Minnegerode, director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, believes a national portrait gallery would be invaluable historically. He said:

MANY REMEMBERED

"It is not necessary that each portrait, each bust be a triumph of art, though, of course, certain artistic qualifications will be necessary. A national portrait gallery, such as the one in London—we should have one like it here—is splendid and useful because of its historical significance."

In the British national portrait gallery pictures are arranged chronologically. They begin with the earliest days of English history. Continue in an unbroken chain to the present moment.

KILLER TRAPPED BY DOG HAIRS

By International News Service.

Warren, O., May 23—Trapped by the blood of a dead dog, Ray Jutila, 20-year-old married man, confessed today, according to police, to the "torch murder" of Marie Tobin, young wife of his best friend.

Jutila, a star athlete and widely known swimmer, admitted he stabbed and slugged 21-year-old Mrs. Tobin and set her bed afire Wednesday night, police announced.

Mrs. Tobin's unclothed body was discovered on the burning bed. Nearby lay the body of the victim's pet dog, stabbed to death.

Jutila was taken into custody five hours later. Investigators discovered bloodstains and a few hairs, apparently from a dog, on his trousers. These strains and hits of hair led to the confession, police said.

HUGE RANSOMS TRACED BY U. S.

Washington, May 24—Of more than a half million dollars paid to free kidnap victims in half a dozen or so noted ransom cases, Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation today reported recovery of $230,146 65 "or almost half."

Hoover said that tracing of ransom money often is more difficult than actual pur-uit of the kidnapers.

Hoover said:

"The largest ransoms paid were $200,000 each in the Urschel and Bremer kidnapings.

"Urschel has recovered $127,-750, but Bremer less than $5000. I sually ransom money is rapidly spent in typical criminal fashion; on vice, gambling and articles of luxury."

An example of this, Hoover said was the $60,000 paid for release of Charles Boettcher II, wealthy Denver, Colo., broker, Hoover said:

"Our men found $9,000 of this cached in the gang hideout on a Dakota farm. The remainder had been dissipated by the six persons indicted."

REDMEN URGE 'DOWN WITH REDS'

Binghamton, N. Y., May 24—Down with Communism in this country.

The Great Incohonee of the Red Men of America has spoken.

In a proclamation broadcast throughout the nation, the great Incohonee, Arthur J. Ruland, called upon all members of the order to get behind the movement to have Congress pass the resolution now in the hands of the Immigration committee, giving aliens until January 1, 1936, to declare their intentions to become American citizens or be immediately deported, and providing that every alien now in the country must become an American citizen before January 1, 1941, or get out.

Great Incohonee Ruland's proclamation calls on all the tribes and councils of Red Men in the United States to endorse this resolution and demand their respective senators and representatives support the measure.

The Great Incohonee's appeal is based on the increasing number of criminal aliens in the country, who openly defy the laws of our land and jeopardize the safety of our institutions."

He cites atrocious crimes committed by such aliens as a cause for the enactment of drastic laws for their deportation and he especially approves the feature of the resolution that provides that jurisdiction in alien deportation proceedings be transferred to the Department of Justice and that there be created in such department a bureau of alien deportation."

Authorities said Evancho, father of seven children, had been smothered under tons of rock and dirt that slid into the cave.

HOLLAND

TWO O'Casey Plays By Abbey Group

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Two of Sean O'Casey's plays—half the noted playwright's output thus far—will be played here by the Abbey Theatre ensemble at the Hollis Street theater.

They are "June and the Paycock" and "The Plough and the Stars."

George Holland

One of the other two O'Casey full-length plays, "The Silver Tassie" is not included in the repertory, and as far as Boston is concerned, the fourth O'Casey opus is not likely to be seen in the next few years. That one is, of course, his "Within the Gates"

* * *

Many months ago, in a too-brief account of a meeting with Mr. O'Casey on his visit here, the remenberable feature of the story used in this space was that Mr. O'Casey was anticipating the advent of a first-born in Dublin-town.

The playwright was excited by the impending event, and was grieving about the distance that separated him, through business reasons, from the good Mrs. O'Casey.

* * *

It was not until early today that this column learned that the O'Casey heir is living. There was no mention of the young O'Casey in the cable dispatches, nor did the theatrical journals print the news.

But John Tuck, producer of "Within the Gates," was informed of the arrival, several weeks after the baby was born.

The harried Mr. Tuck held up the news that "Within the Gates" would not be played in Boston (although it wasn't "banned," if you remember) until a similar fate had greeted the famous work in Toronto. Then the producer wired the bad news in one cable. The reply was:

"It's a boy."

* * *

I should not be surprised, nor would Leo Gaffney, either, because it was Mr. Gaffney who asked Mr. O'Casey about his next play, if Mr. O'Casey might not be at work right now in his doings writing a play about America.

"Are you going to write a play about America?" Mr. Gaffney asked the Irish dramatist.

"There's a play in the place, all right," was the reply. "But I'd need more time on this side; I don't like the boat trip, and I'll have to be going back."

Mr. O'Casey, however, had more time in America than he had expected.

A new Actors' Equity proposal to fix minimum salaries for summer theaters may affect the summer theaters in New England. The actors' union thinks that, if new plays are to be tried out, the summer theater proprietors should pay senior members of the organization at least $40 a week, with $25 the minimum scale for juniors.

Everett Marshall Will Star in Warners' Musical

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, May 24—Golden voiced Everett Marshall is now on the Warner Brothers lot. Marshall had a try at pictures for RKO a few years ago but he had a lot of poor pictures which did not help him to gain the recognition everyone expected.

In spite of the miserable material, however, his voice registered as it has done in opera, in concert and on the radio.

Musicals being Warners' specialty, they are going to see that their new tenor gets a break. He will be starred in "Romance in a Glass House," by Jerry Wald and Julius Epstein, which goes into production June 1.

Louella O. Parsons

If Warners can do for Marshall what they have done for Dick Powell, he will be sitting on top of the world, for there is no young singer more popular than Monsieur Powell.

I don't think I am over optimistic when I say that Joel McCrea's destiny was set when he was signed today by Samuel Goldwyn on a five-year contract. On only one or two occasions has Sam picked losers. He usually has winners and Joel is the second male star that he has fostered, Ronald Colman being the first. He will play opposite Miriam Hopkins in "Barbary Coast" and then in "Splendor," the second Hopkins picture.

But this is only the beginning. The nice part of the whole thing is that a home-town boy makes good. Joel is a native son, having attended Hollywood high and Pomona College and is a member of a well known local family.

Almost any moment there will come whizzing over the wire a story that United Artists and Fox have amalgamated. This is not idle chatter but a fact. Joseph Schenck, head of United Artists, and Sidney Kent, head of Fox, have been in daily conference in New York. My understanding of the situation is that it will not be a production union but rather an arrangement for the distribution of pictures.

At last Madame Schumann-Heink is going to realize her ambitions and make a motion picture. She has been on the verge so many times and something always has happened. But this time everything's set and that grand old lady who still sings with all the fervor of a young girl, arrives here Monday to play a part in "Here's to Romance."

Jesse Lasky who signed her, will see that she gets a chance to sing and act. This is the picture starring Nino Martini, the opera star, in which Reginald Denny has the second lead.

Chatter in Hollywood. The twin boys of Richard Dix are so exactly alike that even their own mother can't tell them apart. One baby, however, has a birthmark on his leg so if they continue to go through life looking so startlingly alike, Richard says he will let the one boy go stockingless.

Richard sails from New York June 5 for his British Gaumont assignment, "The Tunnel," but alas, alack, Mrs. Dix can't go with him now. She had expected to with one baby, but with twins it's a different story!

Snapshots of Hollywood

Handsome NINO MARTINI stepped out at the Coconanut Grove with MARY BRIAN, the boy is a whiz with the girls even when he isn't singing but he seems to be concentrating on mur MARY; The MARQUISE DE LA FALAISE'S picture, "Kiki," previewed before an interested audience: CONSTANCE BENNETT among those who applauded his movie effort

MAE WEST giving the Santa Monica realtors a thrill and a hope that she will take a beach house for the summer; she has been shopping for a beach home; COUNTESS DI FRASSO introducing the visiting Greek PRINCESS KATHERINE to Hollywood at a small tea and cocktail party; ERNST LUBITSCH entertaining with a dinner in honor of the PRINCESS and MADAME JERITZA.

MR. and MRS. TIM WHELAN, the former MIRIAM SEEGAR, expecting a visit from the stork any minute. All the big parties planned in SANDOR INCE'S honor postponed; He is rushing back to Budapest without as much as howdy to Hollywood. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Margaret Lindsay finally falls for Jimmy Cagney in "G Men," Warner Bros., exciting story of federal sleuths, now at the Scollay.

Ozzie Nelson, with Harriet Hilliard brings his popular band to headline the new bill on the stage at the Metropolitan.

Swedish Dialogue Film Shown

The all Swedish dialogue film comedy, "The Women Around Larsson," featuring Edward Person, Sweden's popular movie comedian, is currently on the screen at Tremont Temple.

Final performances are scheduled for tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Film Coming To Fine Arts

Following the final showings of the popular Viennese operetta, "Two Hearts in Waltz Time," which continues through Tuesday at the Fine Arts, an interesting series of film importations will be presented at the Back Bay house.

The New England premiere of "Carmille" with the most famous stars of Paris stages, Yvonne Printemps and Pierre Fresnay in the leading roles, will take place on Wednesday.

Among the other notable films housed for Fine Arts showings are "Ariane," with all English dialogue, starring Elizabeth Bergner and directed by her equally famous husband, Paul Czinner; Anatole France's story, "Crainquebille," on a double feature program which also presents the American film by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, "Crime Without Passion." Also "My Heart Is Calling," starring the noted Polish tenor, Jan Kiepura, and his fiancee, Marta Eggerth; "William Tell," filmed in Switzerland and featuring Conrad Veidt; Pola Negri in the French film "Secrets of Napoleon III," and the widely discussed French film, "The Depression Is Over."

Bette Davis Stars

'The Girl From Tenth Ave.' At Paramount, Fenway

By JOYCE DANA

The girl from the wrong side of the railroad tracks fights tooth and nail for her man in Warner Bros. film, "The Girl From Tenth Avenue," which opened yesterday at the Paramount and Fenway.

Bette Davis is the determined young woman who has what it takes, a cinematic quality happily reserved for the girls who start life with a handicap instead of a silver spoon.

Ian Hunter, a good actor from the London stage looking less like a movie star than Hollywood usually permits, is the scion of wealth who is saved from dipsomania or suicide when his Park avenue fiancee marries somebody else.

A spunky little working girl watching a fashionable wedding, rescues the jilted and drunken man from the milling crowd about St. Thomas. Her pretty consolation leads to a hurried marriage, which sobers the participants sufficiently to permit their formulating a reclamation plan.

The new Mrs. Geoffrey Shedwick well walks out when, as, and if her husband wishes her to. In the meantime she'll help him forget his old love, conquer the demon rum, and get going in a new and better life.

In the inevitable complications that follow, the bored society wife sends still another man to the dogs and his cups for solace. When her disillusioned husband and her erstwhile lover meet at the club bar, they discover over a friendly bottle just how superficial the lady's charms were all the time, and a chastened and penitent Geoffrey goes back to his Tenth Avenue bride.

Since the mood of the picture is a bit indecisive, Miss Davis has a couple of opportunities for some heroics, which she carries off well. But for the most part, and thanks to some flashes of good dialogue, there's a good deal more comedy than drama.

Excellent supporting cast presents Colin Clive as a rather dull society husband and a very funny Ineke Adler, Alison Skipworth in a grand dame role that's perfect, and Katherine Alexander as the Park Avenue matron who steps out of character long enough to throw a grapefruit at her rival.

On the same bill is "Behind the Green Lights," with Judith Allen as a lady lawyer surrounded by murderers, cops and robbers. Norman Foster is her detective-sweetheart, and Sidney Blackmer the suave and slick villain.

2 ARMY FLIERS FOUND DEAD

Heavener, Okla., May 24—Wreckage of an army airplane and the bodies of Second Lieutenant William C. Holloday of Indianola, Ia., and Private Ira Hicks, who took off from Muskogee for Shreveport last Sunday, were found by a searching party 35 miles from here.

The plane apparently made its way over Big Eagle Mountain safely and then plummeted to the earth, ripping a path through the trees approximately 100 yards long.

The machine had been partly consumed by fire, and the bodies were reported badly burned and mutilated.

Army planes from Shreveport, La., and Muskogee had searched a wide expanse of this rough country minutely and returned without a clue.

A TIP FROM WASHINGTON, D. C.

NEWS TRAVELS FAST in the nation's capitol.

Whenever Government officials make a decision, millions of people want to know what it is.

There's a Government decision about gasoline, for instance, that's made thousands of motorists stop and think.

It's this: Gasoline for the Government's emergency duty must pass a more rigid set of specifications than that for ordinary use.

IF YOU EVER DROVE an ambulance, you'd know why Government buyers demand a faster-starting, more powerful gasoline for their emergency vehicles.

But you don't have to be an ambulance driver to get a gasoline like that!

You can buy it all of the time... and without extra cost... at any Texaco Fire-Chief pump.

THAT'S NOT A CLAIM. It's an actual fact.

Texaco Fire-Chief gasoline has been matched against the Government's higher, emergency specifications.

It meets the rigid U. S. Government requirements for use in ambulances and fire-engines.

TEXACO FIRE-CHIEF

When you buy at this pump you will be getting, at no extra cost, a gasoline that meets the Government's requirements* for fire-engines and ambulances

JUNGLE GOLD -:- A New Novel of Thrilling Adventure -:- By Rex Beach

On their way back to the hotel Hannah said:

"Dan Marchand is an angel; he's helping me out with a new idea."

"Yes?"

"Do you realize there's no hospital in Cortes?"

"Never having used one I hadn't stopped to think about it. For that matter, did you ever notice that we don't have any old men here in Honduras? Fact! Nature knocks them off early or they kill each other."

"Suppose something should happen to Stevie?"

"I'm worried about that," the father admitted gravely. "But with you on hand I know he'd be safe."

"Well, he isn't. We must get a decent hospital and a good American doctor here."

"Of course. I'll speak to Dan today. We'll build one."

"That will take time. There's a place already built if we could get it."

"You mean Montero's palace? No trouble getting that, if it'll do."

"Oh, yes there is! Dan offered him a good price but he absolutely refused to discuss the matter."

"Does he know that you want it?" Hannah nodded and her husband frowned. "Strange! I should think he'd like to get rid of that white elephant and leave the country."

"No, indeed. And it's a pity, too, for it's precisely what we're looking for. Who is Montero, anyhow?"

"He was one of the Salazar crowd; in fact, he was mayor here when we landed. Mattern was all for shooting him that morning we took the town, and Heaven knows he deserved it.

"I've often thought it was something of a pity that Don Manuel intervened. However, Pedro and I are like that."

Steve held up his two forefingers

"We're buddies. I'll see him right now and I'll bet you get your hospital."

That ship in the offing was indeed the Roatan. She was drawing close and Steve was itching to learn what had happened on her northward trip, but it would still be some time before she could anchor, so leaving Hannah at Capachino's he strode on in search of Don Pedro Montero.

As Steve strode up the shell walk leading to Montero's Folly, as the Europeans called it, he heard the rattle of the Roatan's chains close in-shore.

Don Pedro was plainly astounded at his caller's effrontery in crossing his threshold. He did not unbend suffic.ently to offer Steve a chair, so the latter helped himself to one, the most comfortable in the room, then lighted a cigarette

Anger in His Eye

His chatted politely about this and that, enjoying the Spaniard's patent discomfort. When he did finally arrive at the reason for his coming he put it in a manner which brought a gleam of mingled anger and resentment into the black eyes opposite him.

Steve had heard something which ratified him beyond measure something which had considerably altered his opinion of Don Pedro.

"Of course! I understand your feelings towards me and your attitude towards the government. I daresay both are quite natural under the circumstances. That makes your gift of your mansion the more magnificent"

"Gift! You expect me to give my mansion?" Montero's eyes bulged now, his jaw fell. "Never!" Montero leaped to his feet. "Never! This is outrageous. It is the act of a bandit. Where is the law of the country?"

The old rascal had turned a bilious green; he was ready for murder

"Well! In a manner of speaking I'm the law," Steve told him with an insolent smile.

"You have probably discovered that what I say goes. I'm no longer Minister of War in fact; but I am in effect, and you doubtless realize that Don Manuel allows me a pretty free hand in cleaning house. I'd advise you not to appeal to the . w.

"You see one must come into court with clean hands and that's something you can't do. Never could do, as a matter of fact. Remember there are a number of old charges laid up against you which can easily be brought forth.

"I assure you they will be brought forth and thoroughly aired if I say so. Then what? Fancy yourself a bankrupt, an exile, instead of a public benefactor. My wife indured Dan Marchand to offer you twice what this house is worth and you refused. An affron' to her is an affront to me.

"Under the circumstances, it comes hard to be as polite as I have been. I'm a man of impulse and—"

Steve did not finish the sentence he merely fixed a longing gaze upon the withered throat and prominent Adam's apple of his hearer.

When Montero spoke his voice was feeble, it was the voice of a sick man.

"I — didn't fully understand. Perhaps after all a sale can be arranged. At least we can negotiate—"

"Negotiations are over. The offer is withdrawn. I wouldn't consent to deprive you of the supreme satisfaction of performing your first and perhaps your only public-spirited act.

"I'll draw the preliminary agreement here and now, fet out your pen and paper. The Roatan is in and I want to hear what her fruit brought."

With shaking hands Don Pedro obeyed.

About this time, Marchand's office was the scene of another stormy interview

Shortly after the Roatan dropped anchor Dan was surprised when his door flew open and Fred Tibbler, purple with rage, bounced in upon him.

At Tibbler's back was the captain of the ship. Without preamble, the former shouted:

"Dan, you're a scoundrel! You're a thief and—"

"Hello, Fred. What's all this?" Marchand eyed his visitor with amazement. "What have I done?"

"Don't pretend innocence: you're as guilty as hell and you know it."

Marchand smiled faintly.

"All right! Now that I've been tried and found guilty suppose you tell me just what I'm guilty of."

"Are you going to tell me you don't know? I suppose you can't guess what happened to the Roatan? . . . Those ventilators! That crew of ruffians!

"By God, I've been 10 years in this business and I never heard of a trick as lousy as that! And the Costa Rican, too!

"Both cargoes a mass of stinking pulp! But other people are going to hear about it."

Marchand was too greatly surprised to be angry; across his face spread an expression of incredulity, of wonder that would have meant something to anyone less excited than his business rival.

Tibler, however, was in a frenzy, his face was congested, his body shook, he could not speak without shouting.

As the significance of what he had heard sank in, Marchand rose, protesting in agitation:

"This is all news to me. I can't imagine—"

"You liar!" Tibler moved as if to hurl himself forward, but the ship's captain intervened.

"It's the dirtiest deal ever pulled off," said the latter, "but this is no way to settle it. I say take it to court."

"What happened to your ventilators?" Marchand inquired.

"Stopped up, that's what!" the officer bellowed. "The very first night out, when the fruit was hot. I didn't dream Montgomery was in your pay of—"

"I give you my word I had nothing to do with this. I fight fairly. If I can't beat you honestly—"

Again Tibler broke in savagely

"God! After I broke my back to get that stuff out! And fruit at $4! You're smart as the devil. You think I'm licked. Well, I'm not.

"I'll fight you now until one of us goes under. You sank my barges on the Motagua, you hired my best men away, you scared my workers and now—this! But I'll get you if it takes the last cent I've got."

"That's about what it'll take."

The three men whirled at the sound of an icy voice to discover Steve Pentecost in the open door.

He entered the room, dwarfing the others by his bulk; to Tibler he said,

"You started this; now you're squealing because I finished it."

"I started nothing," Tibler shouted. "If you put Montgomery on board my ship I'll have the law on you."

Silently Steve laughed.

"What law? Get your bearings. You're in Honduras. It's my country . . . Now listen!"

His buttonholed the irate magnate and looked down at him coldly, as he had once stared into the eyes of an intruder in that New Orleans brothel where the course of his life had been abruptly changed

"Never mind Montgomery: I'm responsible for his acts. You say I stopped your ventilators; try and prove it. Try and prove anything on anybody. Dirty trick? Sure!

"But you've made this into a dirty business and Dan doesn't know how to keep step with you. I do. I like your tactics.

"You knew what kind of a man Mattern is but you hired him just the same. Well, you cut your own throat when you brought him back to Honduras. There's a dead white man up in the bush and you killed him.

"I buried his murderers alongside of him. Two for one. That's the percentage I take. Fight? Hell! This scrap hasn't started. Now get out!"

Tibler, thoroughly cowed by the light in Pentecost's wintry blue eyes, muttered something unintelligible, then turned and left the room. His astonished captain followed.

What does Montero finally do? What is Steve's next move in this grim war? Don't miss tomorrow's exciting installment in the Boston Evening American.

NRA Would Eliminate Minimum Bid Limits

By Universal Service

Washington, May 24—American business today faced possibility of the stiffest price competition it has yet been forced to meet.

The National Industrial Recovery Board has proposed a plan for White House consideration eliminating all minimum limitations on bids for government supplies and forcing bidders to offer to private interests the same prices quoted the government.

The proposal contemplates cancellation of executive orders requiring bidders to hold prices within 1? per cent of their listed prices and barring non-codified industries from competing. In their place a new executive order would be issued based upon the new plan

Outlining the proposal, Donald Richberg NRA chairman, said:

"We want to get away from any criticism that the government is chiseling under code operation.

"If this new system is approved by the President, bidders will no longer be limited on prices. They can bid any amount they choose, but their bids will become their new filed prices and will be available to private interests. It puts the government and private interests on an equal footing."

The effect of the new plan, it is believed, will be intense competition and a sharp forced reduction of prices generally. Coming at a time when the administration is trying to maintain and raise prices, the board's proposal was received with considerable surprise in capitol circles.

WILL CONNELL on

IC4A Fathers, Sportsmen Gamblers Try to Take It

Pinch Hitting for Austen Lake

Will Connell

A THIN, very tough line of Coast athletes heard marching orders this morning. Then started the parade that brings it to Harvard Stadium next midweek, for the Intercollegiate track and field battles.

A day's tuneup on the nicely manicured cinders and sward for them and dozens of other collegians. Then the Californians, Friday and Saturday afternoons, prove that their home climate does temper athletes to world record pitch.

From Stanford, UCLA, California and USC they come. A majority of the titles will go home with them.

There's plenty to draw the customers (so IC patriarchs hope) with men flirting around world records in every event. This year the IC games are the best since the World War for all around sparkle. But this is a column (Ed. Note: Hear, Hear.) and not a news story (Ed. Again: So that's it.) so more about soloists of the affair another day.

This is a salaam to the men who stage the games. They take a big gamble on track and field promotions. This in a day when horse and dog saucers tanglefoot the sports public.

Thus do the IC's show that the thick waisted, thin thatched elders can gamble plenty, in theeir own way, when they've something at stake. In their case the stake is amateur sport. In the long run the best for everyone.

* * *

Amateur Sports Hanging on Ropes

You know, the IC's aren't strictly a Harvard headache. The proceeds go into the IC hope chest, probably with a hollow rattle these parlous times. And from the total, teams contesting get a pro rata slice of cake, sweetness depending on the gate.

This year with pro sports lure making every amateur event a major risk, the success of the Intercollegiates can help keep all the glory games out in the open road, in high. Otherwise amateur sports, hanging on the ropes even now, may take the K. O. punch.

Without pure sports, what will growing youngsters have for ideals of fun? They've little enough left now.

* * *

IT'S WELL this epistle chance came along. A year or two hence may be too late. Television on sports is just a lurch around some corner. If John, Mrs. and the little Does can tune in all the big affairs on the parlor wall, they may stop reading sports sermons. Then where will we be?

* * *

All's Well on U. S. L. T. A. Front

SPEAKING OF SPORTS promotions, the hungry days may be history for the noble U. S. L. T. A. Mrs. Helen Wills Moody is on the road back. Her great forehand shots whistle again.

Even if that service has lost some of its smoke, it's good. Helen could slip far, and still beat most of the ladies who follow the tennis circuit.

If the comeback is 100 per cent, imagine the way the lonely terraces of Forest Hills Stadium will sprout cash customers, later on this season. Especially if Mrs. Moody and Helen Jacobs, present U. S. Queen, declare war once more.

Lean indeed have been pickings since Bill Tilden combed the L. T. A. worries from his hair and started giving better tennis shows than amateur days produced.

A few Helen-Helen battles would end the years of famine, for the tennis association.

SPRING MUSINGS—

More advance data on the 1936 Olympics in Germany. Adolf must expect someone to attend. The enclosures can accommodate a large portion of the European populace, if the press agent is truthful. Even enough room for all the baseball pass chasers in Boston.

Maybe the idea is to get everyone together, then start a real war. That will be easy, if the usual international sneering and snarling follow the Olympics.

* * *

MORE MUSINGS—

School football players completing their Spring drive. And melting off more poundage. Coaches melting, too. Faculty budgeteers rapidly aging as the cost sheet lengthens. Boys buying grandstands, and locker rooms, etc., by the sweat of their brows. Street corner quarterbacks, school committee members, city officials already starting to put on dangerous victory pressure. Except in a few cases, no one ever even saying anything constructive. Skeletonized school sports programs. Schoolboys not getting the help they deserve. And when you think of the way the taxpayers' money is wasted on other things!

Oh well, the boys get plenty of fresh air. That's good for them.

Champ 3-1 Choice Over Tweddell

By Associated Press

St. Anne's-on-the-Sea, Eng., May 24—William Lawson Little, Jr., of San Francisco tonight stood on the threshold of doing what no other American ever has done and which only two Britons have accomplished in 50 years—winning the British Amateur Golf championship two consecutive years.

The husky 24-year-old Pacific coast shotmaker won the title in his first bid for it a year ago at Prestwick, and also holds the American amateur championship.

Qualified today for the 36-hole final tomorrow when he will be matched against Dr. William Tweddell, himself a winner of the crown in 1927.

In the quarter-finals this morning the defending champion made short shrift of George L. O Henriques, the 42-year-old stock broker who had been the sensation of the early rounds, winning by 6 and 4.

This afternoon Little put out Rob-

Tweddell scored two noteworthy victories in advancing to the final. His first victim of the day's play was Eric Fiddian, a former runner-up for the crown, who fell by the score of one up. This afternoon he accounted for the 44-year-old British Walker Cup player, Tony Torrance, 2 and 1.

As he has done to his last four victims, Little eliminated Sweeney with a sensational last hole. Going to the 16th he was two up and three to play.

He rapped out a 290-yard drive and followed it up with a 150-yard mashie shot to within three inches of the cup for a finishing birdie there. As the ball nestled close to the cup he closed his eyes and shook his head.

Sonnenberg Favored to Defeat Danno Tonight

BATTLE LOOMS AS ONE OF YEAR'S BEST

By Jack Conway

Gus Sonnenberg, chief exponent of the flying tackle, will try to halt the victory surge of youthful Dan O'Mahoney and his famous "Irish Whip" when they battle in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at a Paul Bowser show at the Garden tonight.

Sonnenberg is expected to enter the ring a 10 to 8 favorite. This is due to the fine form he has shown in recent matches and to the fact that he has had more mat experience than the young Irishman.

Danno will be facing the flying tackle for the first time. The former champion has won 99 per cent. of his bouts by wrecking his opponent with a tackle.

TURNING POINT

Sonnenberg gets tremendous power behind his tackle, and when he hits a mat rival it is usually all over but the cheering.

Sonnenberg believes he will not experience much difficulty in nailing the rangy O'Mahoney with a tackle.

Gus says it is easier to score a tackle against a big fellow like Danno than against short, stocky grapplers.

Sonnenberg has been here since the first of the week. He looks as if he is in good condition, and is confident he will knock off O'Mahoney and continue on to a title go with Ed Don George.

The bout will be a turning point in Gus' career. If he wins, he can go on to win a new fortune out of the wrestling game.

Win or lose, Sonnenberg will leave for South America early next week where he will engage in three matches. He plans to make the trip by plane.

O'Mahoney, like Sonnenberg, is ready for tonight's go. The young Celt is driving for the heights in the mat game and does not intend to permit Sonnenberg's tackle to upset his plans.

Danno recently returned from a trip to the Coast, where he added "Man Mountain" Dean and Joe Malcewicz to his list of victims. He says his "Irish Whip" will overcome Sonnenberg's tackle in the Garden skirmish.

JORDAN'S Park League LEADER

The Boston Park League will complete its second week of action tonight with games listed on four diamonds.

The present standing finds Jordans at the top with five straight victories and six out of seven, holding a two-game lead over the second place St. Lazarus team of Orient Heights, a new and surprisingly strong entry.

The rest of the teams are pretty well bunched down the line presaging one of the finest races in twilight league ball in years.

Out in Roslindale, George Walker has turned the management of the team over to Jerry Shanahan, former Holy Cross infielder and mentor of the Rosebuds two years ago. Jerry played off and on for Roslindale last season and has played in all the games to date this year.

The recent slump of the Roslindale team, always a contender for titular honors, caused a shakeup. Jerry's first move was to go out and get Hank Garrity to catch, and he will strengthen the pitching staff right away. The fans will be on hand to greet him tonight when the Commonwealth Club plays a return game at Fallon field.

Jordans will send Mush Callahan to the mound against the St. Lazarus Club tonight at the Dorchester Town field. He is the lad who shut out the Orient Heights team, 8 to 0, on May 16, holding them hitless during the six innings of the game.

Dick Casey will take his club to Roxbury to meet the strongest Madden Club in years, while St. Augustines will be host to the Hennigan Club at the South Boston Stadium.

The return of Paul Burns has helped the Southie outfit, and Bill Benson predicts his club will be in the race all the way.

Clocker One of Marvels Of the Race Track

By Walter Kiley

Rockingham Park, N. H., May 23—Among your marvels of the race track must be listed the clocker.

Long before dawn he is stationed at one of several strategic timing points.

With stop watch in hand he clocks a steady procession of thoroughbreds going through their morning workouts.

During the course of a year, hopping from one track to another as the parade moves north and south, east and west, he is called on to recognize on sight some four to five thousands different horses.

Yet he never makes a mistake in identification.

A star on the head, a tip in the heel, smaller, perhaps, than a dime, a snip in the nostril, these are his points of recognition.

Clocker John Henry, an old time jockey who has spent his life with the runners, 15 years as a rider, 30 years in all hanging over the rail, state that there are only seven or eight top-notch clockers in the country.

"The mind must be a human catalogue on specific data on horses," he explains.

"You have to grow up with them. You have to know their peculiarities of color, of size, of weight, their mannerisms and all the irregularities which sometimes are so minute as to escape any but the most expert observer.

"In addition you have to keep up-to-date books in which are recorded every mark on every horse running in competition."

Dutra Ill; May Not Play at Oakmont

Detroit, May 2 4(AP)—The Detroit News says Olin Dutra will not defend his United States open golf championship at Oakmont next month unless he can rid himself of a severe cold from which he has been suffering for ten days.

"Unless I feel better than I do now there will be little use for me to go to Oakmont," Dutra was quoted. "I know I couldn't score well."

Dutra played an exhibition match in Ann Arbor yesterday and was in Chicago today. He won the championship last year at Merion Cricket Club while suffering from a painful stomach illness.

Babe Turns Preacher

Pittsburgh, May 24—The government is forcing the youth of the land to gamble, said Babe Ruth in a stirring Maranville Night address here.

"Baseball used to be the game for the boys," said Babe. "It still would be if the kids weren't driven to the race tracks to gamble.

"The government must take the blame, for they are legalizing betting in nearly every state in the Union."

Rabbit Maranville had quite a day.

In the afternoon at the ball game he was given a set of golf clubs. In the evening he heard himself extolled — particularly by the Babe—as a man, an athlete and a sportsman.

BRANDT Due to Hurl FOR TRIBE

Pittsburgh, May 24—It was to be Lefty Ed Brandt for the Braves and Big Jim Weaver for the Pirates in the second game of the series here today.

The opening game was taken by the home club, 7 to 1. Ben Cantwell started for the Braves, Swift started and finished for the Bucos.

Cantwell lasted four innings and was raked for four runs and five hits. Swift held the Braves safely in check all afternoon.

Sparky Vaughan and Pep Young were the big guns in the Pirate attack. Vaughan got a homer and double in addition to fielding nine chances without an error.

H.-C. TWIN BILL AT SOLDIERS FIELD

CRIMSON'S LAST TITLE BID

Harvard's intercollegiate league fate will be settled this afternoon when the Crimson plays its first doubleheader of the season with Cornell, and tomorrow afternoon when the return clash with the league-leading Dartmouth Indians is scheduled for Soldiers Field.

The doubleheader this afternoon will take the form of two six innings contests, Cornell foregoing its right to have one game played at Ithaca because of the depression budget.

The games are equally important for the Ithacans, who are tied with Harvard for a second place with four victories and two defeats.

A double victory for the Crimson today and a win over the Indians tomorrow would mount Harvard to the top of the league, where Dartmouth has been resting since the start of the season.

Coach Fred Mitchell undoubtedly will save his ace, Bill Lincoln, for the Dartmouth game and will pitch Drib Bragglotti and Dick Walsh who has just recovered from an ankle fracture against the Ithacans.

Cornell has a trio of dependable hurlers in Phil Ross, who faced Harvard a year ago, Daniel Lindheimer, who has won two games already, and John Batten.

Cornell at the moment is leading the Eastern League in batting with an average of .333. Six regulars are batting .300 or better, Kreimer, .417; Froelich, 375; Dugan, .304; Downer, .364; Switzer, .467; and Krukowski, .300.

HURDS Hire Crack BATTERY

Besides the replay between the Jefferson Club and the Miller Oil team at the Waltham bike park, the Hurd Family nine of Arlington will entertain the Cambridge Cubs this evening at Spy Pond Field.

Freddy Loftus, pitcher, and Johnny Spartachino, catcher, who formed the battery for the Worcester team in the Northeastern League last summer, will work for the Hurd nine.

The Jefferson Club players who yelled murder when the game was called at Waltham Tuesday night when they believed extra innings could have been played, are being given the opportunity by Jimmy Hanney, manager of the Miller Oil team to see what they can do over a longer route. The Miller team was out front, 4 to 2, when the game was called.

HINES, PICARD Lead With 67's

Great Neck, L. I., May 24—Jimmy Hines and Henry Picard were tied for the lead with 67's as the Metropolitan Open swung into its second round at Lakeville G. C. today. Par for the course is 71.

Willie Macfarlane missed making it a three-way tie when he flubbed a short putt on the home green.

Paul Runyan, defending champion, had a 72.

Lefty Ties Up With Crowder In Fenway Mound Duel

Mickey, Jr., Suh! A Little Bit of All Right

(Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer)

Junior Cochrane, son of Mickey, practices at first base for his future big league career. No catcher's paraphernalia for Mickey, Jr. No, indeed. He wants to be a first sacker. Just like Hank Greenberg. Mickey, Jr., was mad because his dad wouldn't let him come to town with the Tigers, who play the Sox at the Fens today. The youngster is attending the Detroit Country Day School, and must stay there until next month. But then he'll travel with pater Mickey and perhaps root the Tigers to the top of the heap.

SOUTHPAW ACE LOOKS LIKE OLD SELF

By Bill Grimes

In the event that anyone had taken a kick at a member of the Detroit Tigers in the opener here, he would have broken a toe, for the American League champions were covered with horseshoes.

But this is another day.

Through the combination of a winning brand of pitching on the part of Robert Moses Grove and some timely hitting, the Red Sox hope to move back into the first division, from which they just departed.

During the last western trip Grove held the Cleveland Indians to five hits in seven innings. Then he split his hand and was obliged to withdraw. He was charged with the defeat because at the time of the accident the Sox were trailing, 2 to 0.

Last Monday, on his first appearance since his enforced retirement in Cleveland, Grove allowed Chicago just four hits in eight innings.

Manager Mickey Cochrane will send Alvin Crowder in against Lefty Grove.

FERRELL OUT

Crowder has been on the winning end in two starts since the Tigers took to the road, and Mickey is confident he'll stop the Red Sox and give Detroit its seventh victory in eight road games.

Although Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe made the Red Sox look helpless at times in the opener here, it was "Hank" Greenberg who was responsible for the Tiger victory.

With Charlie Gehringer on first, Greenberg slapped out a home run over the left field wall in the fifth round.

That was Greenberg's offensive offering to Detroit and, as rough as that blow was for the Red Sox to take, it was nothing in comparison with what he did to them defensively.

Roy Johnson started off the sixth inning with a single. Rick Ferrell connected with a line drive which was labeled for two bases—possibly a triple. But Greenberg stuck up that long fin of his, speared the ball with his gloved hand and nonchalantly stepped on first base for an unassisted double play.

In the eighth inning, the Red Sox got to Rowe for a double and two singles, and then Bing Miller was sent up to hit for Gerge Hockette.

Bing slapped one down toward first base, and it looked as if the ball game was finally swinging around to the Red Sox side of the ledger. But once again the Greenberg reach entered the picture.

Hank reached out with his gloved hand and came up with the ball to retire Bing. That was the last straw. The Red Sox were through for the day.

Moe Berg will be assigned to catch Lefty Grove this afternoon for Rick Ferrell got his thumb in the way of a foul tip in the eighth inning and will be out of the game for three or four days.

Inspectors Prevent Fraud At Greyhound Tracks

DOGS UNDER CLOSE SCRUTINY UNTIL LAST RACE

By Sam Cohen

(This is the fifth of a series of articles on racing greyhounds, which soon will be staging their thrilling performances at the new Wonderland track, Revere Beach.)

No. 5

SUPERVISING THE RACES

State supervision of greyhound racing, such as is mandatory under the Massachusetts statutes, prevents even the remotest possibility of fraud.

The law provides for the establishment of state inspectors at the greyhound tracks from the time the dogs are turned over to the officials by the owners until the end of the last race at night.

Every greyhound entered at each meeting is registered and certified by the National Greyhound Breeders and Racing Association, the recognized American authority.

The owner presents the registration papers of each dog to the track officials and state inspectors before the race meeting.

The papers show the dog's name, color, age, sex, dam, sire, and grand dam and grand sire on each side.

These papers find their way eventually to the paddock judge, who, when the greyhounds are placed in the paddock before each race, checks each dog with his authentic description.

This record of each greyhound is also recorded by the keeper of the official Greyhound Stud Book, the official publication of greyhound statistics. The track officials keep copies of this book on file at all times for reference.

Aside from the registration certificate the state inspectors and track authorities also have a complete Bertillon record of each dog entered for the meeting. This record makes the dog identification virtually fool-proof.

The Bertillon system practically eliminates any possibility whatsoever for an owner to slip over a "ringer" on the officials.

Like human beings, there are no two dogs exactly alike. They may appear similar on superficial examination but close inspection usually discloses the difference.

KAMM And Myatt GIVEN AIR

Philadelphia, May 24—Cleveland was shy two of its veterans today as it continued its series with the Athletics here.

The departed are Glenn Myatt and Willis Kamm. Myatt, a 10-year catcher, was given his unconditional release Kamm was sent home "for the good of the ball club."

Kamm has not been suspended, but he must answer to President Alva Bradley and General Manager Billy Evans.

Disloyalty, in both cases, was the general theme song.

Three Teams Drop Out Of Retail Store League

By Bill Grimes

Out at the Woodland Golf Club this afternoon, the Retail Stores Four-Ball Golf League will open its season.

Due to the withdrawals of Chandler's Shepard's and Sears Roebuck, the league will start with only seven teams contesting for the Mitton Cup, which is emblematic of the championship and now in possession of the Jordan Marsh Co. . . .

Kennedy's and Leopold Morse are trying to round up a quartet of golfers. If successful they will join the league next week.

The opening matches of the season will be Filene's vs. Hovey, White's vs. Gilchrist, and Slattery vs. Conrad. Jordan, the defending champion, drew a bye for the first round.

Filene's will field an exceptionally strong team, but just how successful it will be is conjectural, for the matches are played on a handicap basis, and the Filene quartet will go broke giving strokes. Filene's will start Jack McCarthy, Dick Ruggles, Gerry Reed and Jack Egan.

Reed is a new comer to Retail Store Four-Ball competition. But he knows all the answers, for he plays with the Brae-Burn team in the Boston Four-Ball League.

The Needham Country Club opens started this morning. Needham is offering gross and net prizes for each of the three decisions. Bill Kemble won this event last year with a 76.

The annual Brae Burn invitation medal play tournament winds up this afternoon . . . The Dedham Country and Polo Club is in wonderful condition for the club pair mixed foursome championship, which gets underway this morning . . . Mrs. Willard Howard and Win Cobb, Charles River, will defend their mixed foursome title.

The Midland District came through with a fine victory over The Country Club at Weston to win the W. G. A. team match championship . . . Midland had too much strength in the lower half of its playing order for the other contenders.

Mrs. G. P. Buell and Laura Robbins are tied for the individual honors of the W. G. A. team match season . . . They met with only one defeat in 10 matches . . . Mrs. Buell had a close call when she was two down and three to play to Mrs. R. K. Byers, at Dedham . . . She managed to pull herself together, however, and win by a margin of 1 up.

• • •

Tom Howe, who has been the assistant professional to his father at the Wellesley Country Club, has been selected to take over Jack Shea's berth at Kernwood until such a time as Jack is able to get back on the job . . . Incidentally, according to Bob Hutchings, Shea is improving rapidly since he learned the real cause of his illness.

Frank Clough, former manager of the Woodland Golf Club, has returned from the South and will spend the summer at Plympton, Mass. . . . Frank has been managing the Forest Hills Country Club down in Georgia. After a very busy winter he says he is content to rest up for a few months.

GREENTREE ENTRY WILSON'S BEST BET

Mr. Boston Little Great Champ

By JACK CONWAY

WILLIAM LAWSON LITTLE, JR., has the poise and mental qualifications that make a great golf champion. His brilliant play in the British amateur golf championship has added lustre to his already impressive record.

I saw Little win the national amateur golf championship at The Country Club in Brookline last Fall. He is a big, handsome fellow with the back and shoulders of a heavyweight fighter or wrestler.

Mr. Boston

If he could smack an opponent in the ring a third as hard as he hits a golf ball, he would be able to knock over Max Baer.

Little has little sentiment when he is playing golf. He is in there to win and in as decisive a manner as possible.

"Little isn't popular with most golfers," Grantland Rice told me. "It is because he always bears down and wins his matches by as wide margins as possible."

Even our leading golfers resent receiving a severe drubbing.

Francis Ouimet and Bobby Jones were popular with golfers. When at their best, they usually won, but they didn't strive to gain the victory by lop-sided scores. When they had a match virtually won, they took things easy.

If Little were a fighter, he would knock out his opponents with a single punch if possible. He would consider that the proper thing to do.

• • •

STEEL NERVES

LITTLE has nerves of steel. He is at his best when driving at a critical stage of a match or when trying for a long putt. He plays better when pressed.

This is characteristic of great champions in sports. They may be relied upon to turn in their greatest performances in an important contest when under intense stress.

There are numerous athletes who can break world records in practice, but who go to pieces in severe competition.

I like the Little type of athlete whether he is a golfer, ball player, boxer or wrestler. He is the type that furnishes the great moments in sports.

You may not like him for defeating your favorite star, but if you are fair you are compelled to admire his brilliance in competition.

• • •

GOLF TOURISTS

LITTLE would not make a good golf tourist. The golf tourist is usually an amateur who accepts invitations to appear at various swanky clubs throughout the country. He is paid liberal expenses and plays against the leading club members.

The tourist usually wins his matches, but only by small scores. He does not bear down as he does not wish to injure the pride of the local celebrities who are helping to pay his expenses.

Then there is the touring "amateur" golfer who will only play at a particular club in the event there is a side bet of from $200 to $500. He prefers officers of the club as opponents, and wins as he pleases. It is a polite way of getting what a professional would term a guarantee.

Little has not been guilty of any of these practices, and as a result should be held in high esteem by those persons who are interested in the welfare of golf.

McLARNIN BOUT

YOU will get an idea as to the present interest in boxing when Jimmy McLarnin defends his world welterweight championship against Barney Ross in a 15-round bout in New York next Tuesday night.

New York is set for a rather large boxing season with Ross battling McLarnin, Max Baer defending his heavyweight championship against James J. Braddock on June 13, and Joe Louis opposing Primo Carnera on June 25.

There is not so much interest in the McLarnin-Ross go as existed when these welterweights collided a year ago. Ross won the first bout and then McLarnin came on to regain his championship in a return meeting. The "rubber" tussle has failed to get the public excited.

The fans do not believe McLarnin has the old urge to fight. They figure he is going to shift next Tuesday night merely to pick up a big purse, and that he no longer gets any thrill out of boxing.

I look for Ross to go to the post a favorite. I thought he was outpointed by McLarnin in their first tussle, but in the second meeting Barney won, even though he didn't get the decision. Ross still has youth, and has more enthusiasm for boxing than McLarnin.

On Sir in Smart Hands; Best of Lot in Second

By Dave Wilson
(Selections Made for Fast Track)
BEST BET—GREENTREE ENTRY

Rockingham Park, May 24—Torita and Jamboree, which will run coupled as the Greentree entry in the opening number, shape up as the outstanding wagering proposition on a difficult card here tomorrow afternoon.

FIRST RACE
GREENTREE ENTY, SHYNO, ZOWIE

The Greentree Entry of TORITA and JAMBOREE appears to have a strangle hold on top honors. Either is capable of winning. TORITA Estatbished a new four and one-half furlongs track record in drubbing a stuffy field only afew days back. JAMBOREE is a rovsily bred first-time starter that has worked well enough to win. SHYNO placed to Torita last time out. He again shapes up as the main danger. ZOWIE, a successful Jamaica campaigner, is a strong possibility.

SECOND RACE
ON SIR, BRIDE LEFT, FAST MOVE.

ON SIR, away since last summer, is in smart hands and will likely come up a dead fit horse. He is the class on past hope. BRIDE ELECT, fast and faint hearted, turned in a clever performance in placing to crack flyer last trip. The B. R. colorbearer is strictly the one to fear. FAST MOVE, fathered up since Texas, is good and sharp right now. He may upset the dope.

THIRD RACE
ROUGH PARTY, ENTHUSIASM, GOV. SHOLTZ

ROUGH PARTY, under a feather of 102 pounds, figures to stand a world of beating in an affair of this sort. That the J. Y. Christmas color-bearer was never better may be attested by his recent second to Governor Shortz. ENTHUSIASM, a front running son of Bubbling Over, turned in a good effort behind Bachelor Dinner the other day. The Whitneyite will likely be on the front end far as he goes. GOV. SHOLTZ earned a close decision over the top one last time. He merits strong consideration despite an eight-pound shift in weights.

FOURTH RACE
ZEMBLA, MYNAH, FLAT ROCK

Zembla, a plodding daughter of Vespasion, served notice that she was ready for Brackets by finishing third to Boocap and Popo last time. The Christmas color-bearer is dropping four pounds off that effort and will relish the increased route. MYNAH, an improving sort, finished third to Carsono and Bright Bird last time. FLAT ROCK'S most recent effort was in the nature of a conditioner and should not be taken too seriously.

FIFTH RACE
IDENTIFY, VICAR, LYNX EYE

IDENTIFY, hero of the Tohoggan and Granit State stakes, is jumping up six pounds, but I cannot see anything heading the Man o' War colt for the heavy sugar. The Vanderbilt colorbearer's most recent effort is all that can be desired. VICAR, an erratic sort, flashed one of his best efforts of the season in placing to the top one in the Granite State. The Wheatley colorbearer shapes up as strictly the one to fear off that effort. LYNX EYE, winner of the Speed Handicap on opening day, turned in a corking effort in the Granite State considering that he only had a few days' rest.

SIXTH RACE
SLIPPER KING, HUG AGAIN, SPEEDMORE

Shooting for a price here and expect to get same if SLIPPER KING topples over the highly-fancied HUG AGAIN. The Haymaker colorbearer is a performer of class, and comes up to the race fit as hands can make him. The Maryland form charts will attest to his ability. HUG AGAIN figures to reverse the tables on SPEEDMORE. The latter finished a head in front of the top one last time, but will have a seven-pound shift against him in this affair.

SEVENTH RACE
MIDSHIPMAN, GRAINGER, PRIMUTE

MIDSHIPMAN, a stout-hearted runner, has been sharpened up in shorter race, for an affair of this kind. Just a question of intelligent handling. GRAINGER, second to highest point, looms as the main danger. PRIMUTE, a clever Belmont winner, is picking up considerable weight, but she may upset the dope.

EIGHTH RACE
WINGED FLIGHT, BAYCART, OGLE

WINGED FLIGHT is dropping 10 pounds off a good effort of only a few days back. Under a feather of 106 pounds, he should never leave the issue in doubt. BAYCART displayed good speed in drubbing cheaper ones last time. OGLE is heaps better than his most recent efforts would indicate.

Schacht Gets Big Hand

If Al Schacht's head was somewhat larger than usual this morning, liquor couldn't be blamed for it.

No, it was the encomiums heaped on the Sox third base coach by his many friends and admirers at the Temple Israel Brotherhood Meeting House.

Schacht entertained with his inimitable comic skits, and then gave the usual civic tribute speech.

Moe Berg of the Red Sox and Hank Greenberg of the Tigers also came in for a bit of laudation. Both attended.

SWEEP Tickets FRAUD SAYS SMITH AT ROCKINGHAM

Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., May 24—A flood of sweepstake tickets, called the Universal Sweepstakes and "guaranteeing" $16,000 in prizes each week for the horse races at Rockingham Park is pouring over New England.

Lou Smith, general manager of Rockingham Park, today branded the sweepstakes emphatically as a fraud, and warns the public against purchasing the tickets.

"The track has absolutely no connection with the so-called Universal sweepstakes," he said. "We do not know the sponsors of the sweepstakes, and take this opportunity to warn the gullible that fraudulent sweepstakes tickets are commonly sold. A ticket has fallen into our hands, and we consider it a duty to warn the public not to purchase them."

On the front side of the ticket the following appears:

Every Horse, Every Race, Every Day.
Universal Sweepstakes
Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H.
Guaranteed, $16,000 Prizes Each Week.

The Universal Sweepstakes will pay the prizes listed on the reverse side of this voucher to the holder of the ticket and receipt bearing the winning numbers on all horses entered in each race, each day, each week. Winning horses are published in all leading newspapers in the U. S. A.
Universal Sweepstakes Co.
(Over)

The tickets sell for 25 cents each. On the reverse side the daily prizes are announced. On each race the promoters promise to pay $200 for the first prize, $100 for second and $50 for third, and $10 for each horse running.

HANFORD'S Kin to Ride AT SALEM

By Walter Kiley

Rockingham Park, N. H., May 23—Another Hanford is headed here to join the riding colony.

This time it is the 16-year-old Ira, a brother of Buddy, who was killed in a spring melting at Pimlico, and of Carl, who shares top honors with Alfred Robertson during the present meeting.

Ira started his apprenticeship recently at New York. He will be on in a day or two and is to be under contract to Max Hirsch.

Carl is still under the weather from grippe. He is running a fever and doctors prescribe rest until Monday.

The New Hampshire Handicap tomorrow stands out prominently on the early meeting card. It is for a purse of $5000 added.

Identity, A. G. Vanderbilt's stake horse, gives the first major victory. He will be entered as favorite.

Vicar and Howard which trailed him in the Granite State Handicap, Lynx Eye, Speed Handicap winner, Dark Hope, Teraline, Thomasville, Prince Fox and Collateral are chief contenders.

Jockey George Watson is the second triple winner of the meeting. He rode Stagen, Spiral and Conchita yesterday . . . He is a brother of Bob Watson, who is under contract to Alex Smallman, whose horses run in Canada.

Jockeys Fallon, Faust, Warner and Watson are making serious threats on the top riding honors now held by Robertson and Hanford . . .

Coaches Deny Charges of Don Faurot

By Associated Press

Columbia, Mo., May 24—Coach Don Faurot's charge that the University of Missouri is losing athletic talent to schools offering inducements in the way of scholarships, jobs, etc., today drew denials from Northwestern and Texas universities and Centenary college.

Athletic authorities of those three schools declared they have no Missourians on their athletic rosters.

George Washington university, also included in Faurot's bitter denunciation of outside schools he charged with bidding in native Missouri high school heroes, was silent.

Briefly, here was the response to Faurot's charges:

KENNETH L. (TUG) WILSON, athletic director, Northwestern University: "I do know of one athlete in the university high school at St. Louis who applied for a Northwestern scholarship. I turned it over to the faculty committee on scholarships and don't know what action was taken. I know Faurot, and he's a good fellow."

COACH CURTIS PARKER, CENTENARY: "That charge is false. No such offer has been made to any Missouri athlete. There are no Missouri boys on the athletic squad."

Your entry must reach the "Daily Double" Handicap Game Editor of the Boston American, P. O. Box 1946, or deliver to 8 Winthrop Square, Boston, not later than 1 P. M., Saturday, May 25

Here are the Rules

To play the "Daily Double" Game name the horses you think will win the first and third races at Rockingham. Then place the names of the horses you believe will run second and third in each of the two races.

Tickets to the Rockingham Races will be given each day to winners.

Winners will be picked under the following rules:

Entries that pick the "Daily Double" will be given first consideration. Should there be fewer "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, winners of the remaining tickets will be scored as follows: First counts 4 points, second counts 4 points and third counts 2 points in each of the two races. The entries scoring the largest number of points will be declared the winners.

In the event there are more "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, the prizes will be given to the "Daily Double" winners who score the largest number of points in selecting the horses that run second and third in the first and third races. In scoring these winners the following rules will be observed: Place counts 4 points and show 2 points for each race. Tied contestants will each receive a ticket.

In the event any of the horses you pick are scratched, the next horse will be automatically moved up one space on your list. For example, should your first choice fail to start, the second horse named becomes your first choice and the third horse your second choice.

Except where horses are scratched, your selections must run in the order in which you list them on your entry blank in order to be counted. ONLY THE NAME OF ONE HORSE MAY BE SELECTED WHERE THE HORSES ARE COUPLED IN BETTING, AS IN ENTRIES AND FIELDS. The decision of the judges will be final and no entries returned.

A coupon for Monday's "Daily Double" selections will be printed Saturday.

Each day's winners will be printed in all editions of the Boston Evening American the day after the races are run (Saturday's winners in Monday's editions).

CHAMP Tops Sweeney 3 AND 2

stampeding spectators who followed his match against his fellow-American. Little was surrounded by motion picture camera men.

They asked him to sink a three-foot putt to show posterity how he does it. After missing three at distance, while the movie machines ground out innumerable feet of film, little edged a little closer to the hole and dropped one from two feet amid loud cheers.

Tweddell, who is often called "the most underrated golfer in England," went out in the same fashion as the champion but failed to match Little's marvelous pace on the back nine.

Little played the inward holes in two under 4s. He slipped over par once, at the 14th hole but he could stand it because he had bagged a birdie three on the tenth hole.

Challenger 38

Little's challenger in the final is 38 years old. After winning the championship eight years ago his best performance until this year was to reach the fourth round in 1933.

He captained the 1928 British Walker Cup team which invaded the United States in 1928 and was crushed at the Chicago Golf Club, Wheaton, Ill., 11 matches to one. He was beaten in the singles by George Von Elm and with T. Philip Perkins lost in the foursomes to Von Elm and Jess Sweetser.

He's not as long as Little from the tee—as are few players—but he's a cool customer and plays his irons, particularly the long ones, with fine length and good direction.

Little Aids Foe

One of the interesting features of the Little-Sweeney match was the fact that Sweeney wore a glove on his right hand Little loaned him. When they were hitting practice drives before their match Sweeney told Little his hands slipped on the club shaft and that he was hooking his drives.

"There," said Little, handing over his glove. "Try this for a remedy."

It wasn't long after Little gained the final that bookmakers hustled about their business around the clubhouse. They offered 2 to 1 and there was one bet of £90 to £30 recorded.

In the quarter-finals this morning Torrance eliminated young J. Morton Dykes, one up in 19 holes, and Sweeney put out Alex Walker one up, 18 holes.

How Little Reached British Golf Finals

St. Anne's-on-the-Sea, Eng., May 24—Hole by hole description of the Lawson Little-Henriques match for the British amateur golf championship

FIRST HOLE

The Californian started inauspiciously, his first tee shot finding a bunker to the right of the green, giving him a tough uphill stance. He hammered his way back to the far side of the green, but his putt stopped six inches short. Henriques, who had been outdriven by 40 yards and bunkered, gave the big gallery a thrill when he placed his iron second four feet from the pin. He missed his chance for the hole with a bad putt, each taking a 4.

SECOND HOLE

Little marched into the lead at the second hole when Henriques topped his second shot and got only 40 yards. Little slightly pulled his No. 2 iron on the second shot, but he chipped from the left of the green to within a yard of the pin and sank it for a 4, while the Englishman took 5.

THIRD HOLE

They both pulled their drives on the third. Little's second was carried by the wind 30 yards short of the pin. His next overran and he missed a putt. Meanwhile Henriques, bunkered at the left of the green, sailed over the green, then chipped three yards past the hole, equalling Little's 5.

FOURTH HOLE

Little's drive off the fourth tee was perfectly controlled and his second rested 15 yards to the right of the pin, but he misjudged the wind, requiring another putt. Henriques' third was five feet short of the pin and the hole was halved at 4's.

FIFTH HOLE

An error by the official scorer nearly cost Little the fifth, where Henriques took 3 and the American 4. The scorer incorrectly thought that Little had offered a half. Little was bunkered at the edge of the green, but blasted his way to a yard from the pin with a mighty spray of sand. Henriques, who had used a spoon to land to the right of the green, then chipped over the green. While Little was shaking the sand from his hair and clothes, Henriques staged a remarkable recovery and stymied him.

SIXTH HOLE

Little drove strongly from the sixth tee and his second dropped 20 yards left of the pin. He chipped close and sank it for an easy four. Henriques was 30 yards short with his second but a good approach and a fine putt enabled him to halve the hole.

SEVENTH HOLE

At the seventh, the English player pulled his drive to the edge of a bunker. He played for safety with one foot in the sand and the other up in the air. He recovered but a brassie shot which followed struck a spectator

Little's brassie second was hooked and low but he found a safe lie and his pitch was three yards short. Henriques third brassie reached the green

When the champion was about to putt the wind carried the ball toward his putter. Neither the official marker nor Henriques noticed it, but Little called attention to the fact and earned himself a penalty of a stroke. He won the hole with a 7, however, to go 3 up.

EIGHTH HOLE

Henriques hooked his drive into the rough at the eighth but pitched to within 60 yards of the pin. Little had a good drive and his second shot was only 12 yards from the cup, lying to the left of the green.

The American pitched very short and missed a four-yard putt, taking 5. Henriques halved the hole.

NINTH HOLE

Little negotiated the ninth in par 3, driving to within twelve yards of the pin and missing his first putt by four inches. Henriques cut his tee-shot into the rough and chipped over the green for a 4.

Turning for home, Little displayed errorless control of his iron shots. His driving against the wind was superb, and Henriques never had a chance to recover.

TENTH HOLE

Little was four yards from the pin with his tee shot at the 10th. His chip was overstrong and his putt stymied, resulting in a half in fours

ELEVENTH HOLE

At the 11th, Little's second shot was six yards short of the cup. He overran the pin with his first putt but sank the second 18-incher for a four. Henriques halved it.

TWELFTH HOLE

The American drove straight to the green at the 12th for a perfect three, while Henriques, bunkered with a short drive, played over the green and dubbed his third shot.

THIRTEENTH HOLE

Little found a bunker at the 13th Thirty-five feet from the green, he exploded magnificiently, the ball dropping to within a foot of the pin. Henriques halved the hole.

FOURTEENTH HOLE

The match was all over at the 14th where the champion got a four.

Little Defeats Sweeney, 3 and 2, In Semi-Final Round

FIRST HOLE

On the first hole Little's drive caught a bunker and Sweeney's tee shot went inethe rough. They bota recovered smartly to the green and got down in two putts to halve in 4s.

SECOND HOLE

Both sides of the fairway were lined with 8000 people as Sweeney's drive hooked over their heads out of bounds on the second hole. He reached a bunker on the side of the green and conceded the hole to Little who had a short putt for a par four.

THIRD HOLE

Sweeney drew even with Little on the third hole—461 yards—as the defending champion missed a two-foot putt and lost the hole with a six to Sweeney's five.

FOURTH HOLE

Sweeney took the lead at the fourth hole, where Little hooked his drive into the rough and then missed a five-foot putt for a four while Sweeney chipped his third stone dead for a winning par four.

FIFTH HOLE

The match was squared again at the 156-yard fifth, where Little stuck his tee shot ten feet from the cup and Sweeney's landed on the green and skidded off into the rough. The former New Yorker's recovery slid five feet past the cup. Little's first putt lipped the cup and Sweeney's stopped on the very edge, giving the Californian a par three to a four.

SIXTH HOLE

A quick, careless putt from four feet that failed to disappear in the cup cost Little a chance to become one up at the sixth. As it was he played the hole blunderingly, driving into a bunker and coming out 100 yards short of the green and only a smart approach kept him in the running here. Sweeney's second shot caught a trap and the hole was halved in 5s.

SEVENTH HOLE

Little had a five at the seventh but Sweeney cut his drive and was trapped to the right of the fairway. His recovery hit the top of a bunker. A slived iron put him behind hillocks guarding the green. He pitched back and forth and two punts made 1 in 7. Little used a spoon for his second, reaching 60 yards from the cup and two putts gave him the hole.

EIGHTH HOLE

Sweeney won the eighth to square the match. His tee shot was trapped to the left of the fairway. A recovery two feet from the pin and a putt gave him a four. Little's second shot was to the left of the pins. He ran up short and missed a four-footer.

NINTH HOLE

The ninth was halved in 3s. Sweeney's second was four yards from the cup but he missed

TENTH HOLE

Little planted his second shot three feet from the pin on the 10th and holed out for a winning birdie three to go one up as Sweeney had all kinds of trouble in bunkers and the rough and produced a five.

ELEVENTH HOLE

Their second shots at the 472-yard 11th bounced off the green into a cluster of trees and Sweeney outed too strong, but Little had his approach three feet from the hole and his putt caromed off Sweeney's ball into the hole for a par four and he became two up.

TWELFTH HOLE

The 228-yard 12th was halved in 3s, both players reaching the green with No. 1 irons. Little was now two under 45 for the first three holes on the back nine.

THIRTEENTH HOLE

Little belted his drive 340 yards to the apron of the 13th green, Sweeney's tee shot was 50 yards behind. They both chipped close and somewhat nervously missed their putts for birdies, the hole being halved in par fours.

FOURTEENTH HOLE

The wind took both their second shots short of the rough to the left of the 14th green. Little chipped short of the carpet and Sweeney lobbed his approach four feet from the hole and won it with a four, Little slipping one over par.

FIFTEENTH HOLE

On the par four, 478-yard 15th, Little hooked a long drive into the rough. His patch from there to the green was partly blocked by trees but he played a great shot with a driving iron to the edge of the green and won the hole with a four when Sweeney took three from the edge of the green.

SIXTEENTH HOLE

Little drove 200 yards on the 16th and electrified the crowd with a sizzling mashie shot to within three inches of the cup and then he tapped the ball in for a birdie three to close out his fellow-American rival who carded a four.

FANS' Poll Is DROPPED

INDIANS TILT ON JULY 8

By Associated Press

Cleveland, May 24— The all-star, major league baseball show here July 8 will be run from the manager's bench from the beginning this year.

The citizens out in the bleachers won't have a word in selecting the players to take part in the game.

The National League managers will pick a National League team and the American League managers will pick another from their circuit.

President Will Harridge of the American League and President Ford Frick of the National League met here with Leslie M. O'Connor, secretary to Judge K. M. Landis, and officials of the Cleveland Indians. They announced several changes in the manner of conducting the game.

New Plan

Heretofore teams have been selected by a poll of fans. The new plan was designed to give every team representation and to make sure that fans do not select players who, because of illness or other reasons, cannot play.

Presidents Harridge and Frick will announce the lineups on June 28. Frankie Frisch of the St. Louis Cardinals and Mickey Cochrane of the Detroit Tigers, last year's World Series managers, will lead the two teams. Their decisions will be final. Each team will have 20 players.

Big Advance Sale

Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland Indians, announced today that 52,000 seats already have been sold for the game

Proceeds of the game will be distributed among the welfare funds of the two leagues and the welfare fund of the National Association of Professional Ball Players.

The American League team will be the home team and players will wear their own white suits. National League players will wear their road suits.

HINES Beats Frenchman

Paris, May 24 (AP)—Wilmer Hines, 18th ranking American player, was forced to go five sets today to defeat Alexandre Goldwyn, an unknown Frenchman, 6—4, 3—5, 7—5, 12—14, 6—4 in a first round single match in the French hard court tennis championship.

The weather caused the other matches on today's program, including semi-finals in the men's, women's and mixed doubles, to be postponed until tomorrow.

Henriques Thinks Well of Little

St. Anne's-on-the-Sea, Eng., May 24 (AP) — George L. Q. Henriques, the 42-year-old stock broker who was W. Lawson Little's quarter-final round victim this morning in the British amateur golf championship, has offered £90 to £30 the husky Californian retains the championship.

"It's awful what Little does to you," Henriques told the Associated Press. "I was driving as well today as ever in my life, but after Little pounded out a couple of 'whistling' drives I was ruined. I couldn't get my feet right and felt like I had four legs. He's terrific, simply terrific."

CRIMSON Choice Over YALE

Harvard dares a tradition of two decades in its dual meet with Yale tomorrow afternoon. Not once in 20 years has a Crimson track and field unit been able to outscore its Blue rivals at New Haven.

Yet tomorrow another favored Harvard team, figured to capture at least 10 of the 15 events on the varsity program, thrusts aside tradition and challenges the jinx which has pursued its biennial efforts in the last 20 years.

The Crimson freshmen, also, are favored to emulate the example of their varsity brethren, while two yearling competitors, Mills of Yale and Gritzmyer of Harvard, are expected to set a pace in the dashes fast enough to win them places on the Harvard-Yale team which will journey to England next month for its meet with Oxford and Cambridge.

Harvard in four meets to date has won the G. B. I. and heptagonal titles, leading Yale by 30 points in the latter games, and has beaten both Dartmouth and Princeton in dual meets. Yale, on the other hand, was well down the list in the Big Seven games, defeated Penn in a dual meet and edged Princeton, preciously walloped by Harvard by a single point, 68—67.

Harvard on record should be an easy victor. But as usual comparative past scores mean little or nothing when Harvard and Yale meet, and although the Crimson on paper has enough strength to run up 85 points against the Ells, Coach Eddie Farrell and his fellow Harvard strategists point to that 20-year jinx and hope to pull through by a hair.

Conceding Erskine Smith, of Yale, the two dashes, which is not at all conclusive since Edie Calvin's remarkable comeback on Saturday against Dartmouth, Harvard should win the 400 meters with Abell; the 800 meters with Tony Bliss; the 1500 meters with Captain John Scheu, and sweep the 3000 meters with Woodard, Playfair and Scheu.

Milton Green, the former Brookline star, can repeat Calvin's stunt of two years ago, by turning in a triple victory in the two hurdles and the broad jump, though he'll receive plenty of opposition from Charlie Dunbar of Yale in the low flight.

'Da Preem' Set for Louis

Arrives in New York Tomorrow

Hot Springs, Ark., May 24 (AP) —Primo Carnera is en route to New York today to wind up training for his June 25 bout with Joe Louis, Detroit Negro, with the warning that "if there is only one man in the ring in the fifth round, that man will be me and I will be standing up."

"Da Preem," who brought his weight down from 275 to 264 pounds while sojourning at the Arkansas Spa, lauded his defy after being told that Louis had promised to knock him out in the fifth round.

"If Louis made that promise, then that is his worry, not mine," said the Italian with a grin. "I will whip Louis."

"Primo is primed for work and it looks bad for Louis," Duffy commented as they boarded a train.

BOSTON TRADE

Reported HOLDING Well

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Boston trade conditions registered some slight improvement during the week. But, according to Dun & Bradstreet, a noticeable increase in business has not materialized.

Wool market activity is the chief sustaining influence with cotton textiles acting as the brake preventing a more spirited pickup.

Retail sales are not only holding well, but show a tendency to increase, when department store collections are listed as good. Building contracts awarded show a more favorable trend, but still run under last year. Motor car registrations provide the brightest news with Massachusetts registrations well ahead of last year.

The municipal power and light plants, provide regulation of utility accounting systems and establish restriction in the case of mergers. All this taking place at what was a special session of the Rhode Island Assembly called by Governor Green to pass the annual appropriations bill and provide for a referendum on holding a constitutional convention. The New England holder of utility securities is plenty busy watching at home it would seem at the same time he is trying to keep up with Wheeler-Rayburn bill developments in Washington.

State Street Jottings: Brokers in the Boston financial district are making more and more switching suggestions a year still receive the call . . . Eastern Massachusetts Railway report showing net profit this year almost double that of April last year was received with cheers. . . . All on a very small increase in railway operating revenues . . . And taxes were up just about the same sum that earnings increased . . . For the four months so far this year net profit was down a fair amount . . . Hold, however, is the improving trend shown in late months that counts.

One or two investment advisory services have turned so skeptical of the market that they have suggested lots orders entered at one point under current levels. Others are telling clients to keep stops at about the same levels but that they should advance them for every point of rally. In other words their idea seems to be that the market is now in sufficient strong shape to stand even a small reaction before bullish sources are confirming this attitude by saying traders should not reach for stocks.

STOCK MARKET

Mixed PRICE TREND Prevails

New York, May 24—The stock market developed divergent trends today but, on the whole, the grip of the bullish forces did not seem to have relaxed to any great extent.

It was the general opinion that the bonus bill veto had ended as a market influence and traders and investors sought other stimulants.

Business and industry came in for closer scrutiny and the foreign situation was not ignored.

Firmness of the rails, long despondently pleased the optimists. The continued demand for scale tered specialties also illustrated the extreme selectivity of dealings.

Grains were subjected to profit taking, along with various stocks. Cotton was fairly steady. Bonds improved. Sterling advanced against the dollar in foreign exchange transactions, reflecting some transfer of funds from Paris to London.

Although the gold currencies were heavy in relation to the pound, they proceeded narrowly in terms of the Anglo-American unit.

Shares up fractionally to a point or so included Union Pacific, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Consolidated Gas, U. S. Steel, Cuban-American Sugar preferred, American Sugar Refining, Standard Oil of California, Allied Chemical, Electric Boat, U. S. Gypsum, National Distillers, Schenley and Case,

Motors Are Off

General Motors and Chrysler sagged and Homestake Mining dropped 5 points. The majority of the metals, tobaccos and Utilities were unchanged or slightly lower.

Some of the sugar company stocks again responded to another upturn in sugar futures to new highs for the season.

The furry in the carrier stocks, aside from the improvement in car loadings, apparently was in anticipation of a helpful transportation message which the President next week.

That the railroad have had rough sailing was shown by the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission which revealed that in February the class 1 carriers suffered a net loss of $14,000,000, compared with a loss in the same month last year of $14,349,408.

While it was recognized that the clearing house loan bill from the legislative slate by no means disposes of the bonus question for the time being, it was felt that the outstanding vote given the administration by the Senate indicated to some Wall Street observers that any new measure introduced will not be predicated on fiat money payment.

Following the sharp advances in lead prices over the past two weeks, zinc quotations were raised $1 a ton today to 4.30 cents a pound, East St. Louis.

BOSTON STOCKS

Are Irregular

An irregular trend marked a moderately active market today on the Boston Stock Exchange.

First National Stores led the upward group, showing a gain of 1⅞ at 49¾.

Sullivan Machine at 13 and Torrington at 35 displayed advances of one point each. United Shoe Machinery and Telephone were fractionally higher.

On the offside, Eastern Gas & Fuel prior preferred lowered 1¼ to 63.

New England Telephone at 101¾ was off ½. Commonwealth Edison of Boston dropped ⅝ at 130½.

AMERICAN TRUST

Brokers Join Fight On Rayburn

The wide forces marshalled against the Rayburn utility holding company legislation was augmented by the first recruit from the ranks of Wall Street brokerage firms.

Although numerous financial houses have privately assailed the pending bill, none have openly urged their clients to communicate with their legislative representatives to defeat it.

A house with a large following inserted the following message in the market letter:

"Holders of utility securities who are desirous of moderating the Rayburn-Wheeler death sentence should write or telegraph their Congressmen and Senators without delay."

The firm made the assertion that if the Rayburn Act and the Banking Bill emerge in better and satisfactory form, it will be rather conclusive evidence that the President is finding his radical associates somewhat embarrassing.

New York, May 24 (AP)—Bar silver steady; ¼ higher at 36¼c.

Today's New York Curb Market Transactions

New York, May 24—Curb stocks turned definitely strong as the session progressed, displaying the first advance of more than a selective nature for some time. Trading was in moderate volume.

Mining shares were the objects of some activity and scored handsome gains in the majority of issues. Pioneer Gold advanced ¾ points and Wright-Hargreaves 1⅛ to 8⅝.

Led by Humble, the oils also moved into higher ground with South Penn Oil and International Petroleum following. Gulf Oil was reactionary.

Utilities were not very active. Quotations were mixed with American Gas and Electric getting off to a good start and Columbia Gas preferred easing ½ point to 87.

Electric Bond and Share common, in the face of a rising trust line, advanced rapidly, selling above 7 for the first time this week as it gained 3 point. Atlas also gained fractionally.

The miscellaneous list also saw substantial gains, United Shoe Machinery, Great Atlantic & Pacific and American Cyanamid extended earlier advances.

Higher Crude Talk Revived

Boost by Standard Oil Co. of Ohio in crude oil revives expectations of early improvement in refining.

A general increase, however, has been anticipated for several weeks, and the latest move may have been the action under contemplation, but until now no change has been effected. The current level of crude oil is $1 per barrel, where it has been for some time.

The boost has talked a 25-cent increase; the Ohio company raised its price only 5 cents. Nevertheless it was interpreted as concrete evidence of a tendency which is expected to carry further.

Observers of the steel industry are inclined to consider as a happy augury the strength in steel scrap prices, which is held to presage improvement in ingot production.

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

Peggy Capper And Barbara Cole Make Debuts

By BETTY ALDEN

YESTERDAY THE MYTHICAL gentleman who attends that powerfully illuminating machine, the social spotlight, removed the old Kleig carbons which have rested cold and unused since the last coming out party of the winter, replaced them with new ones and turned the beam upon the social stage for the opening performance of the debutante revue of 1935-36 . . .

Peggy Capper and Barbara Cole were the two new guest stars who enjoyed their brief moment under the full glare of the spot in the center of the stage, which they will hold but a few days until sister debs claim their hour as leading ladies . . . and then in turn Peggy and Barbara will join the sprightly "all-singing, all-dancing" chorus of the new deb revue . . .

BARBARA STEVENS

Tea at Club

AGAINST A BACKDROP of tall evergreen trees and wrought iron candelabras, the two new debs and their mothers received the many guests whose invitations had bidden them to a tea with dancing at the Oakley Country Club, given by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Cole of Cambridge and Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Capper of Brookline for their respective daughters . . .

Turquoise blue and navy was the color scheme of the dresses in the receiving line with corsages of purples, yellows and magentas for contrast . . . the debs wore frocks of the lighter shade of blue and their mothers stood at their sides gowned in dark blue chiffon of individual styles . . .

Their color scheme blended harmoniously with the riotous variety of blossoms which formed the setting for the stage . . . one of the mothers told us that these settings and properties which were so artfully and artistically arranged, had been designed by a prominent Beacon Hill artist . . .

Drifting in from the wings were strains of popular melodies played by the maestro of many debutante revues, Ruby Newman . . . and also from the wings could be heard the pleasant tinkle of tea cups and gay and confused bits of chatter from those who paused in their dancing to have a spot of tea and a bit of cake . . .

The pourers, most of whom are classmates of the two leading ladies at Miss May's School, were a bright and peppy bevy of girls . . . Carolyn Sampson and Barbara Eaton, both of whom have had their turn under the social spotlight, were the head pourers and being veterans of two seasons, buzzed around with an air of knowing what it is all about . . .

• • •

Frances Birge Among the Pourers

A PRANKISH LITTLE BUD who is destined to be a favorite with the stag line is Frances Birge . . . a diminutive brunette with dancing blue eyes and an irresistible smile, who in one exciting half hour performed, for the first time, her duties as a pourer at a coming out party . . . She was very popular on the dance floor and looked jaunty and smart in a pink satin shirtwaist frock with navy blue gloves, purse, belt and wide brimmed felt . . .

What the well dressed and self-possessed sub-sub-deb sister of a deb wears to afternoon tea was exemplified in the costume of Anne Capper, a most adorable girl who will be ready for her debut after she graduates from Miss Winsor's in two years . . . Her navy blue dress was printed in yellow roses in an all over design and the yellow contrast was repeated in the band on her navy sailor hat . . .

Ursual Coues personified the poised and self-confident post debutante who has experienced the thrills of a successful "first year out" . . . Her Alice blue sheer dress and tiny blue bonnet, her naturally blonde hair and bright blue eyes caught many admiring glances as she danced with Wallie Pierce . . .

• • •

Dorothy Knowles Also in Blue

BARBARA STEVENS was another self-confident young star of last year's revue who could smile inwardly at the qualms and stagefright of the new cast . . . She arrived early with her mother but had so much fun she stayed almost till the strains of Home Sweet Home filled the rooms . . .

The costumes of the new players consisted almost exclusively of tempting prints on crimson or turquoise backgrounds . . . with hats of all varieties from tailored felts to wide brimmed floppy straws . . .

Dorothy Knowles' deep eyes and dusky hair were enhanced by a filmy dress of navy blue with yellow and green dots . . . A mysterious and individual looking deb is Millicent Leeds, whose black hair and eyes shone from behind a seductive little veil . . .

Since Mrs. Capper is one of the popular cogs in the powerful wheel that makes the Morning Musicales possible many of her sister committee members were at the party . . . Mr. and Mrs. A. Barr Comstock, Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Carl, Mrs. Samuel Sprague Stevens and Mrs. Charles Gilbert were all there . . .

Mrs. William Pearce Coues and Bill Coues, Bradley Dewey, Mrs. Hatherly Foster, Jr., Jackie Hammond, Andree and Nancy Cassels and Mary Hastings were others noted . . .

Bartol-Winkley Wedding in June

ADDED TO THE ALREADY confusing tangle of wedding dates checked on society's calendar for June will be that of Jane Winkley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Winkley, who will march down the middle aisle of Grace Church on June 14 to become the bride of George Bartol, son of Dr. and Mrs. John W. Bartol of Chestnut street . . .

Two sisters of the groom, Dorothy and Priscilla Bartol, will be included in the wedding party and with their colorful frocks will add to the picturesqueness of the receiving line at the wedding reception at the Winchester Country Club.

Chatty Notes of Fashionables

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE BRAMWELL BAKER of Chestnut Hill are at the Ambassador Hotel in New York City for a few days.

MR. LARZ ANDERSON of Brookline, is at White Sulphur Springs in West Virginia to enjoy the invigorating baths and to relax after a busy social season in Washington.

Oil FOR THE Lamps of China

By ALICE TISDALE HOBART

Stephen Making Good

CHAPTER 26

(This is a serialization of the Cosmopolitan production soon to be released by Warner Brothers.)

It was a heavy, monotonous diet that Kin provided. He gave them meat three times a day, usually pork.

And sweet potatoes, the native vegetables were few up here, so he said; there were no fruits except the puckery persimmon, and an odd Japanese fruit, something like an orange, but sourer than a lemon.

Stephen ate them, but she could not.

Dreams of Fruit

There were days when it seemed to her that she would not mind anything else if she could only have an orange.

In her dreams, a stand where she had bought fruit as a child often appeared to her.

The oranges piled in a mound upon it were so real that, after she waked, she could feel their lovely rounded skins in the palm of her hand.

She was alone one morning, exhausted after a struggle with Kin over the accounts.

For days she had put off the task, dreading it. Now it was finished and she had shut the door of her room.

Perhaps she was going to be ill. If she were couldn't she ask Stephen to resign?

Then she was ashamed of the subterfuge. She lay on her bed, appalled before the weakness that possessed her.

Suddenly she sat up, startled with a new idea. Strange she had not thought of it before.

It would explain so many moods, so many feelings of the last weeks. Yes, she was sure.

She must be wholly obedient to the company now. Indeed, she would not entertain the idea of asking Stephen to resign. The instinct to protect her young had been born in her.

Winter came, and with each advancing month, north, always farther north, moved the oil.

Winter, and with it, for Hester, peace, her spirits subdued to the service of her body. And, as Stephen had predicted, no longer the desire to go home.

Instead, the more she isolated herself the more intense grew the sense of her own personality mirrored in Stephen's concern for her. And Kin's, too. She did not know why, but she had become of importance in Kin's eyes.

Stephen did not worry about her any more. She was a brick. She was not going to let him down.

His was winning through now, beginning to find that he could rely on his own judgment in doing business with the Chinese. Those sub-agents were doing good work, and the agent was co-operating.

Slowly the sales in his territory were growing. Slowly, too, he swung the balance of business in favor of the Company, and away from Blodgett. Stephen and his rival had become very good friends, each promising to give the other a fair chance.

Then one day Stephen was authorized by his Company to drop prices. He notified Blodgett before he put the reduction into effect.

It was on Saturday, when he returned from making his weekly deposit in the Russian bank, that he found Liu, the agent, waiting in his office.

Good Company Man

Excitedly Liu demanded that Stephen reduce the price again, "to meet Blodgett." So Blodgett had cut without telling him. At once Stephen saw the plan. Blodgett had waited until Saturday to drop prices below those of the Company, knowing that Stephen could not follow without the consent of his organization, and that Saturday noon was too late to get it.

But he'd be ready for him next week-end.

He wrote the boss, asking that he be allowed, up to a certain limit, to use his own judgment about the price cut, both as to amount and to time. That the boss would have to take up the matter with the Shanghai office, Stephen knew.

All the week he waited. Early Saturday morning the telegram came, authorizing him to follow Blodgett's price drop of the previous week.

Stephen was disappointed and humiliated, for all the week he had been soothing the irate agent by the promise of meeting the cut.

He thought of little else; he talked of little else, especially over the week-end when his office was closed.

"Let's sleep late," said Hester on the third Sunday, "then we shan't have so much time to think."

But Stephen woke earlier than usual. He had been dozing when a new phase of the matter aroused him. He woke Hester before he thought.

"It's damned unfair. Look, I'm held responsible for the amount of business in this territory, but I'm given no responsibility in the method of getting it. Suppose it goes down to nothing, shall I lose my job?"

Now Hester was wide awake. "Why, Stephen, what would we do?"

"I'm a brute to worry you," he said, and put forth all his efforts to reassure her.

At last the greater resources of the big corporation wore Blodgett down; but long before, Stephen has ceased to feel any responsibility, other than to report accurately what happened

Hester Feels Shy

It was after coolness had grown up between Blodgett and himself over this cutthroat competition that Stephen became interested in the visits of Liu.

The agent dropped in often for a chat, and Stephen began to think again of friendship with the Chinese.

One day, on an impulse, Stephen asked Liu to come to the house and meet the wife. Hester was delighted at the idea; now she was going to know the Chinese Aided by Kin, she had tea and cakes ready when Stephen and the agent entered the house. The little social event had passed off in all correctness.

He was certain of the success of the venture, when at the end of the call, Liu had invited them to feast with him.

Hester felt shy, going into the great bare restaurant filled with men, where the feast of Liu was held. In the short distance to the stairway, almost as straight up as a ladder, she felt the eyes of all upon her.

Stephen knew that Chinese ladies do not go out publicly with their husbands, but he walked proudly beside Hester to show how he honored her, not realizing that in exposing her to their gaze, like a sing-song girl, he had given the men cause to believe that he held her lightly.

Nor did he realize that Liu believed her to be a favorite concubine; only such women did a man display. Had not Stephen gone out of his way to let Liu see her?

To the second feast, the agent brought his wife, so he said. In reality she was a concubine.

Liu was secretly pleased that Stephen had made it possible to bring her to the feast.

A DELICIOUS ONE-DISH MENU

THIS OVEN MEAL IS QUICKLY SERVED

SAVORY HAM, mushrooms and rice!

Three favorite foods—and three good results from baking them together slowly in one dish.

First, a grand harmony flavor. Second, a saving of money. And third, a short-cut to the evening's fun!

"Just how?" you ask. Well, about the money saving—you know that even a very little meat will go a long way, when baked right with an ingredient such as rice. And about the short-cut—set the casserole right on the table, and save dishes. The rest of the meal is tailor-made around this casserole dish, so as to make delicious eating — and save time, too.

Here's the full menu: Chilled pineapple juice for a perfect beginning. Then the ham casserole with a large lettuce and cucumber salad (vinaigrette or Roquefort dressing). And for dessert, a nice fluffy gingerbread that will taste especially good after the ham. The gingerbread will be baked at the same time as the ham, because it requires the same oven temperature. Notice that you save cooking a separate vegetable by serving a good big raw vegetable salad in this dinner

Ham and Rice Casserole

1 cup rice (uncooked)	½ lb. mushrooms
Boiling, salted water	1½ cups seasoned stock, or tomato sauce or puree
¼ cup butter or shortening	½ teaspoon pepper
1 medium-sized onion	2 medium-thick slices smoked ham

Wash rice. Cook 15 minutes in boiling, salted water. Drain. Cut peeled onion crosswise into thin slices. Cook slowly in heated butter or shortening just until a golden color. Then remove onion, and cook mushrooms (washed and sliced lengthwise through cap and stem) right in the same fat for three minutes. Next, combine rice, onion, mushrooms and pepper. Brown the ham lightly on both sides, and then cut it into squares. Place alternate layers of rice mixture and ham in casserole, putting ham on top layer. Pour stock, sauce or puree over all, cover the dish and bake about 1 hour in a moderate oven (350° F.) removing cover the last 15 minutes.

"Flower Language"

In Modern Style

Authentic, Last-Minute Fashions From New York—the Style Center of America

By DOROTHY ROE

"FLOWERS FOR MADAME" is the current theme song of the stylists.

Fresh flowers are being used as a definite part of current costume ensembles, used in new and unusual ways.

There is, in case you didn't know it, a "tailored corsage" of orchids, for wear with tailored daytime costumes. The stems are wound with velvet ribbon, in a color to harmonize with the ensemble, and are pinned against the collar of the frock or jacket.

For evening, gay young things are wearing a spray of small pink orchids across the back of the head, tiara fashion.

• • •

Flowers in the hair are all the rage just now, reminiscent of Carmen are the sprays of red camellias worn by dashing brunettes these nights on their dark curls, just behind the right ear.

Another new idea is that of attaching a single orchid to your jewelled bracelet.

A striking arrangement of gardenias was seen recently completing the pictorial effect of a white embroidered organdie garden party dress. The frock had a black velvet sash, and was worn with a wide-brimmed black straw hat, banded in black velvet. Three perfect white gardenias were worn at the neckline in front, tied with black velvet ribbon.

• • •

Some fashionables are wearing orchids tucked in their belts, and others are using fresh field flowers for hat trimmings.

A spray of orchids was seen recently fastened to a white ostrich feather fan, and evening muffs made entirely of fresh flowers are another note of the

APPROPRIATE
Gift for HOST'S NEW Home

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am coming to you for some advice. My friend bought a home and is going to move very soon. She is planning to have a housewarming. Would you advise a gift? And what kind? I cannot afford an expensive gift, but I would like to get her something. F.

It is not necessary to give a housewarming gift, but it is a very gracious and generous thing to do. Anything for the new home is an appropriate gift—from a simple set of tea serviettes to as consequential gift as you wish to give.

In linen you might give a breakfast, luncheon or tea set.

In china, a set of dessert or salad plates.

In glass, a clear crystal vase, a set of plates for salad or a "refreshment set" of glasses, with matching pitcher.

A smoking accessory of some kind—cigarette box, ashtrays, table lighter—will be welcome in this new home.

INFORMAL AFTERNOON WEDDINGS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to ask your advice concerning the serving of a buffet luncheon at an informal afternoon house wedding.

1. Is it necessary for the guests to stand while being served? I like the idea of being seated, with individual trays. A plate with the salad, a glass for punch, roll, napkin and salad fork would be on the tray, and the waitress would pass the rest of the food from the dining room table, which would be appropriately decorated.

2. Which would be more appropriate for a small flower girl to carry, a basket of flowers or a bouquet?

3. Should the guests wear hats at an afternoon wedding? The bride and her attendants will wear hats.

4. Is a shoulder bouquet proper for a guest to wear? L.

1. It is always best to provide chairs for guests at a buffet meal, if this is possible—or at least some chairs. And the use of individual trays has become quite popular.

2. I like so much to see the small flower girl carry an old-fashioned bouquet, the so-called "1830 bouquet," a nosegay fashioned of rows of tightly-packed small flowers of pastel shades circled about a lacy ruff.

These quaint bouquets are so easy for the miss to carry.

I saw a lovely wedding the other day in which a demure flower girl carried a single rose —very charming it was, too.

The flower-filled basket, too, we associate with a flower girl, and for this, tiny-caced flowers are appropriate — mignonette, rosebuds, pansies, forget-me-nots, lillie-of-the-valley.

3. Yes, the guests wear hats at an afternoon wedding.

4. Yes.

Linen---Always an Aristocrat

BY ANNICE BRINE

THERE is distinction in this linen and linen lace ensemble, found in one of the town's smartest collections of women's fashions. Perfect for spectator sports, for the country club, for the informal outdoor wedding. It is made of linen that is the finest in the world, imported from Moygashel, Ireland, where flax grown on the King's own estate, in Sandringham, England, is sent to be woven into cloth. The dress is a smart one-piece affair with linen lace top and wide revers. It buttons all the way down the front. The coat is swagger, with wide sleeves and trick double pockets. Powder blue, or a creamy string shade. For information, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her.

THE DECLARER'S ADVANTAGE

The declarer, playing two hands, always knows what his partner holds, because dummy must be exposed.

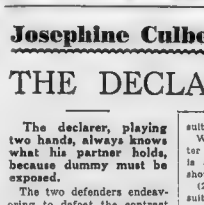
The two defenders endeavoring to defeat the contract have not this advantage.

A great deal of profitable signaling which could be done is spoiled by players who like to "false-card"; that is, to make unconventional plays in an effort to deceive the declarer.

In doing so, unless they are very skillful, they will find they also deceive their partners and thereby lose more than they can gain.

It is important not to false-card when playing the defense unless sure that it can cause partner no harm to gain an incorrect picture of your cards. A particularly pointless false-card cost a game in the deal below:

West, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♠	Pass	2♡ (1)	Pass
2NT (2)	Pass	3NT (3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) The minimum on which a suit response of two can be made.

With so weak a hand, it is better to bid one notrump if the suit is a minor; but a major suit should be shown.

(2) With a fit in the heart suit West is correct in bidding notrump rather than his diamond suit; for, despite his weakness in clubs, the notrump bid more accurately portrays the distribution of his hand.

(3) Despite the minimum nature of his first response, East must not drop the bidding at two notrump when he has strength in three suits.

The game is a valuable prize, well worth risking an additional trick to obtain.

The hearts having been bid, North opened his club suit, choosing the seven—the proper lead from so weak a suit. From a suit headed by an honor the fourth-best is led.

East's deuce was played, and South tried too hard to be clever —he false-carded by winning with the Queen instead of the Jack.

In winning a trick, the lower of touching honors is always the correct play, except when it makes no difference what partner thinks or knows about the hand.

After winning the first club lead, South shifted to the spade deuce. West won with the Queen and was allowed to win a trick with the heart Queen.

He then led the heart Jack and, when North played low, overtook in dummy. When the nine dropped he continued with dummy's heart ten. North now won with the heart Ace.

A club continuation would have defeated the contract; but North was convinced that West had the club Jack, because of South's failure to play it.

So North shifted to the diamond nine; West having concealed his strength in that suit, North hoped that South might hold a combination such as King-Jack, and establish an extra trick while still holding the club Ace.

When North failed to lead a club, dummy's King was protected as a sure stopper, because South would have to lead from the Ace in order to establish the suit.

West lost only the major-suit Aces and two club tricks and made three notrump.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Keep Father Happy—Listen to His Stories

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ONE of the crying needs of domestic life is for ears — sympathetic ears—into which a man can pour his hopes, ambitions, joys, and sorrows —yes, and even his second and third-hand stories.

Read this letter, all of you married ladies and young ladies who hope to marry:

"I am what might be called an 'utilitarian husband.' I pay the household bills, put up shelves and drive nails when nails have to be driven, but the ladies of my family, consisting of my wife and two daughters, aren't particularly interested in me.

"I am 'father' of the comic strip, even though they pretend to be fond of me, dose me when I'm sick and are great at stuffing pillows in the back of my chair when I'd rather be playing ten-pins in the bowling alley.

"Well, the other day an old friend of mine blew into town, and I took her out to lunch. We hadn't seen each other for ages and we had lots to talk about. We used to be in business college together, before I was married, and we talked about the teachers and the pupils and the picnics we had had. I never noticed my daughter sitting in the back of the restaurant. She had a great tale to tell her mamma when she got home.

WORM TURNS

"Then the worm turned, and I said to my women folks: 'It's perfectly true; I did have lunch with Mrs. Blank, and I asked her to phone me again the next time she came to town. It's a grand and glorious feeling to have some woman seem interested in what you say. Every time I open my mouth around this house, you seem bored to tears, or else you discover an errand that takes you out of the room.'

"My wife said: 'But, father, you tell the same stories over and over again.' And I said: 'Then it's grand to have a fresh pair of ears to listen.'

"UTILITARIAN HUSBAND."

This gentleman's letter recalls a pen and ink drawing that made the fame of C. D. Gibson. An enthralled group of people were depicted listening to a man talking, only one woman looked bored to tears. The line under the picture read: "Find the woman whose husband is telling the story."

WIVES ARE LIKE THAT

Wives are often like that. They forget when they've sat up and listened to father's stories as if they were inspired. Now, when their husbands are talking, they look as glassy-eyed as those old wax figures that used to grace department-store windows a decade ago.

Have you ever observed the lady luncheers in a restaurant? Without being a fortune-teller, you can always tell when they're lunching with some other woman's husband. Such animation —with never a trace of boredom, no matter how dull and long-winded their hosts of the noon hour appear to be.

Wouldn't it be well for the ladies who wear the wedding rings to simulate a little interest in father's stories, even if they're thrice-told tales?

LOVE CAME TO HIM FIRST AT FORTY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

A year ago, I fell in love with a married woman. I've met all types of girls, but never fell for any of them, and now this has happened when I'm 40 years of age. I love this woman so desperately that it's ruining my peace of mind. She doesn't know about my love affair; she gets along well with her husband, and I've no intention of being the villain of the piece.

Heaven only knows how hard I've tried to forget it, and I'm constantly afraid I may be led to do something dangerous. I never knew there could be such love in the world as I have for this woman. And think of this happening to me at forty years of age!

You've got to take yourself in hand and act as if this lady were not in the picture at all. She doesn't know you're in love with her, is happy in her home and gets along well with her husband. So that's that.

Find some attractive unmarried girl, and force yourself to be attentive to her. Take her out with you, go to shows, take walks and if you dance, dance with her. Go through the motions of being interested in this girl; persuade yourself that you are. We're all creatures of the imagination.

This procedure has cured a great many cases of love when it is unsuspected, unrequited and impossible.

BOYS DECIDE THEY "CAN TAKE IT"

CHAPTER 353

I LEFT JUNIOR'S query hanging in the air for several seconds.

Indeed, I did not know myself, what punishment I meant to mete out to my small son and his cousin for their nocturnal runaway excursion to the woodland glade from which had come the shot that grazed Dicky's "drawing arm."

If I had been a Spartan mother of a half century ago, with the "spare the rod and spoil the child" motto ever before my eyes, I probably should have kept them in dread of a whipping until Dicky came home, and then entrusted the execution of the sentence to his hands.

On the other hand, if I were the ultra-modern mother of today in the same circumstances I should probably admire and commend the boys for their initiative and resourcefulness, and should glory in the fact that they were "developing their own personalities," by this high adventure—or escapade, depending upon the point of view of the person characterizing it.

READY FOR "SMACKING"

But, being neither, and finding that my instincts clamored to let them off all punishment save a mild reprimand, I basely parleyed with the situation—and with them.

"Tell me what you think about it, yourselves," I said. "Do you think you deserve to be punished, or do you think I ought to let you off?"

They looked at each other again —doubtfully, consultingly — and then their native honesty and their training triumphed over the "natural Adam" so patiently prodding them to accept the tacit release of punishment I was offering them.

"We ought to be punished," Junior said sturdily, and Roderick chimed in quite earnestly "That's what! We ought."

"But, Mother," Junior said hesitatingly. "If you don't mind, we'd rather have a smacking than anything else. It only hurts a little while, and then you're through with the old thing."

I kept my face grave with an effort. Perennially fresh in my memory was a conversation between Junior and Roderick which I incidentally had overheard one day. It contained the advice from Junior to "get close to the tablecloth, and holler like everything, every time the switch comes down. You kin hardly feel it and if you holler loud, they feel bad for you and quit.

But it would never do to let them know that I had discovered their ruse, and I waited only an instant before speaking again.

"Tell me something else," I said soberly. "Look back over your punishments, and see if you can remember how many times you have been punished unjustly, when you didn't deserve it."

Again the exchange of looks, then Junior, said hesitatingly:

"Only once or twice, and they don't matter. The—person—that told you thought they was right when—when they said we meant to do something "

I did not reprove his faulty syntax. I knew that he was using it purposely to disguise the identity of the "person" who had made the complaint to me. But I was aware of it without his telling me. Mother Graham, curious mixture of martinet and indulgent grandmother, frequently complains of the boys, insisting that I punish them for some breach of discipline, nine times out ten repenting ten minutes later and protesting against the punishment.

"WAY OUT"

I rarely punish the children for any naughtiness that I have not myself observed. But sometimes, when I have had a shrewd suspicion that my mother-in-law was right in her strictures, I have given both boys mild punishments upon no other basis than her word. It was one of these, I was sure, that "Junior meant.

It was a "way out," I told myself delightedly, for in my present mood I was most reluctant to give either lad any punishment whatever.

I was not the type of mother that could see her child, rescued from death, in her arms for a second, and then proceeds to give him the "licking of his life" for running away. I had suffered so much suspense during my quest for them, that my joy and thankfulness in finding them made it impossible for me to wish to discipline them.

"Then," I said judicially, but smiling at them, "I think we'll consider that this time, when I don't punish you, will make up for those other times. What do you say?"

Popularity Of Linens

FLAX LINENS are taking their usual important place in the summer sun, with herringbone and homespun weaves among the most popular, and non-crushable fabrics receiving enthusiastic sponsorship for summer suits.

There also is a new wool and linen fabric seen in summer suits and dresses, shown in a herringbone weave and most effective for country clothes in natural and grege.

They are making some dashing color contrasts with linen just now. There is, for instance, a silk linen suit with a natural skirt and a jacket with huge dark red polka-dots on a natural ground.

Answers TO BEAUTY Queries

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

Question—I am confronted with the two following problems which I hope you will help to solve inexpensively. First I would like to destroy the root of superfluous hair on my upper lip. I would like also to reduce my breast. I am only sixteen.

Anxious, Winchester

Answer—The electric needle is the only method which will permanently remove hair from the upper lip. There are a number of good depilatories for this purpose on the market, but naturally they do not permanently kill the roots. I have a set of bust reducing exercises which you may have by sending for them and enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The exercises are too lengthy to publish here. However, at your age I would not worry about reducing.

Question—If you happen to have a recipe for orange flower water please print it in this column. I have heard of this preparation for years and anxious to know how it is made.

Mrs. Susan D., Back Bay

Answer—Orange flower water is an old-fashioned lotion which is well adapted to the skin at this time of year, when care must be taken not to make it too greasy. It is made from half an ounce of tincture of benzoin, a dram of tincture of musk, two and one half ounces of rectified spirits and four gills of orange flower water. The spirits are put in with the tincture before the whole is combined with the perfumed water. This is left to dry on the skin, and may serve as a substitute for water when a cleansing agent is needed.

Question—This question may be out of your line but I wish you would answer it just the same. Last winter I fell on my nose while skating and now there is a hump on it. Is there any way of getting rid of it without having an operation on my nose. I cannot afford to go to a plastic surgeon. I am 18 years old.

Margaret McM., Brookline.

Answer—Much as I would like to help you I am very much afraid that I cannot give you any advice on how to straighten your nose. It is quite possible that your nose may be broken, in which case you should see a physician. If it is a simple break, it could be straightened by a surgeon. The expense should not be great.

Foundation Gives Glamorous Illusion

By JULIET SHELBY

IT IS A known fact that Katherine Hepburn was never considered a beautiful girl until she went to Hollywood.

She had personality, true, but not outstanding beauty. So it is with many girls—they have personality and the foundation upon which to build beauty, but they do nothing about it.

Out in Hollywood several make-up professionals took Katherine Hepburn in hand, analyzed her type, and set about making her a beauty.

• • •

What does this transformation consist of? There is more to it than perfect grooming, for I am sure that Katherine Hepburn has been perfectly groomed ever since she considered herself a young lady instead of a kid in pigtails.

This metamorphosis is the dramatization of your good points after you are perfectly groomed. Fuss with your hair, wear it differently, until you discover which style is most flattering.

And by all means, experiment with your make-up. Try different shades of rouge, lipsticks, eye shadows, face powders, mascaras.

Wear your rouge high and low on your cheeks, paint interesting new lip lines. These are the things to do until you acquire the priceless glamor that has made the Hepburn stock go up.

• • •

But for all makeup you need an excellent foundation. Dry skins, especially, require some aid to make makeup stay put—and not dry the skin more

As this is so important, I keep my eyes open for powder base lotions and creams that do the trick. One such foundation I ran across recently is a liquid that, easily applied, blends with the texture of the skin.

It is used after a thorough cream cleansing or soap and water scrubbing, and it does, indeed, add that certain something to your makeup. Try it and see. Remember you, too, can possess a glamor that will make your stock go up.

• • •

To learn the name of this special powder foundation, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Factory Head Faces Death at the Hands of an Infuriated Steam Engine

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

I guess, boys and girls, that war is like adventure. You don't have to go to it—it comes and finds you. Anyway, that is the experience of John W. Shaw, of Summit st., Norwood, N. J. At the outbreak of the World War, he tried to get in the Navy, and then in the Army, and both times the doctors turned him down.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Then the Government put him in charge of a nice quiet paper factory in Palmer, N. Y., and there he found action that made the battlefields of France look like a kid's fireworks.

Ever see a stationary engine that took a notion to go places? That's what Jack Shaw was up against. There were four stationary engines in that plant he was running. They were placed in pairs, flywheel to flywheel, with a 10-foot passage between them. Engines Number Three and Four were in one engine house. You can forget about Engines Number One and Two.

They were quiet, well behaved machines that never tried to go off the reservation.

Jack Shaw had just arrived at the plant one morning when the trouble started. The watch engineer had just gotten the engines started—was warming them up for the day's grind.

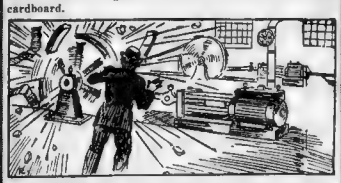
Jack started on his morning inspection tour and found the first two engines working like voo-doo charms. But when he stepped into the room that housed Engines Three and Four, his ear picked up a sound that he had never heard there before.

When sounds are wrong, there is something wrong with the machinery. Ask any garage mechanic about that. Jack Shaw sensed impending disaster.

He closed the iron sliding door and stood still in front of it, trying to figure out what was wrong with the sound of that engine. If he had stepped forward, between those whirling flywheels, he would have been a dead one, then and there.

It didn't take Jack but a second to see what was wrong. Number Four Engine was travelling much too fast. "Throttle her down before she runs away," was the first thought that flashed in his mind. But it was too late. In the next second, all hell broke loose.

The huge leather belt of Number Four Engine parted with a report like that of a 16-inch gun. It hit the brick wall behind the engine and caved it in, as if it had been cardboard.



Jack Shaw's feet wouldn't move. Fright rooted him to the spot. He felt the blood drain from his face as he watched the belt jam between the line shaft and the wall. Then he held his breath as massive sections of the flywheel tore loose from the hub and hurtled it in all directions.

Several sections broke clean through the concrete roof of the engine house. One of them finished the job the belt had started, knocking in the rest of the brick wall behind the engine. And all through the hubbub, Jack Shaw was standing not 10 feet from the center of the disturbance.

The engine governor, straining to control the steam that was being admitted to the cylinder, turned inside out like a storm-wrecked umbrella. Still Jack Shaw couldn't move.

The power of motion—ever the power to think—seemed to have left him when that mammoth flywheel started to burst asunder. For the life of him he couldn't get it back.

Still that tearing, thumping monster crashed and rumbled on. Bits of metal—brick—leather—mortar—were still flying through the air in a veritable hail of debris. The din was indescribable. Suddenly the place went black, as something cut the lighting lines along the ceiling.

A dozen pipes snapped off, pouring water, paper stock and other liquids in a seething mess on the engine room floor.

Jack was glad then that he had his boots on. Without the protection of that insulating rubber, he might have been electrocuted when the broken electric cables connected up with that liquid hodge-podge which, by now, was a foot deep on the floor.

A giant steam pipe—eight inches in diameter—snapped off from the vibration and began pouring steam, under a hundred and twenty pounds pressure, into that little room. In what seemed an eternity, but could have been no longer than a minute, the flywheel was no longer a flywheel.

Every piece of its rim had hurtled off, leaving nothing but the heavy, stubby spokes and the hub to which they were attached.

Hot steam from the broken pipe was flooding the room now. One breath of that stuff in his lungs and Jack would have been a candidate for the morgue. Two breaths, and it would have been the morgue. The thought brought the life back into his legs again. And at the same time, glancing at Number Three Engine, he saw something that chilled him to the bone.

A piece of something or other had struck Number Three's governor breech rod. Another potential runaway, unless he could stop her quickly! He leaped for the top of the steam chest and turned the valve off—just in time.

And then, with enough fright under his belt to last him for two or three lifetimes, he slid through the iron door, and out of there.

There's always an adventure, boys and girls, in anything you turn your eyes on—whether it be a paper mill in upstate New York, or a dog house in Punkin Center.

There are plenty of adventures in your lives, lads and lassies. And when you've written down the facts and sent them in to me—well—there'll be good, green dough in it for you. Tomorrow, I'm going to give you "When Brutes Go Mad."

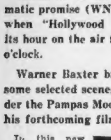
Warner Baxter broadcasts in some selected scenes from "Under the Pampas Moon" which is his forthcoming film feature.



"N. F. T."

In this new swashbuckling screen story Baxter banishes his stick and silk topper, to again assume the type of role which stamped him outstanding as an actor. He has made more of his "he man" talents in such pictures as "The Cisco Kid" and "In Old Arizona" than he has in the drawing room Don Juan parts, where society and country club doings provide the theme. Lonella Parsons, noted Hollywood columnist for your favorite evening newspaper, will introduce the handsome Mr. Baxter.

* * *

Chances are that Vila Logan, Phil Baker's new songbird, will not be with him when he moves from New York to Chicago to broadcast (WBZ) beginning tonight at 9:30. Leon Belasco and his band will be replaced by a Chicago tune troupe. Cornelia Otis Skinner succeeds Walter Winchell on that Sunday night program commencing Sunday, June 2. Cornelia will do monologues, not tattologues.

* * *

In response to many requests, Jessica Dragonette, singing star of the concert with Rosario Bourdon's orchestra (WEEI) each Friday night, will repeat "Indian Love Call," from Friml's "Rose Marie," on the program this evening from 8 to 9 p. m.

Sharing the solo spotlight with Miss Dragonette, Robert Simmons, tenor, will offer the popular "Star Dust." Harmony numbers by the quartet and orchestrational highlights, include "It's Easy to Remember," a medley of Irish songs, the overture to Bach's "Orpheus," Bach's "Air on the G String," Hymn to the Sun, from "Sadko" and Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song."

Another garrulous evening gathering of "Aunt Bess," when Beatrice Lillie will present dramatic monologues of her mad "Bea-Sop Fables" with the Cavaliers Quartet and Lee Perrin's Orchestra furnishing musical relief, takes the air (WBZ) tonight at 9 p. m.

Selections by Perrin's Orchestra include "She a Lath from Manhattan," "The Night Is Young," "Poor Butterfly" and "When Love Knocks at Your Heart," and the quartet will present an old favorite, "Mississippi Mud."

State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley will personally announce the opening of the Nantasket-Boston Steamboat Company summer service on Station WNAC at 6:20 p. m. tonight.

He will have an interesting story to tell concerning this 117-year-old steamship company service.

Nearly 100 boys and girls have now officially registered for the big Junior Birdmen 1935 Outdoor Air Races to be held in Franklin Field on Saturday, June 1.

William B. Harty

The latest to file their entries are: Robert P. Bell, 17, of Keane road, Natick; Wayne G. Johnson, 19, of 199 Grove street, East Bridgewater; Bernard Davidson, 13, of 156 Balua avenue, Dorchester; William McCabe, 15, of 6 Melvine street, Wakefield; Julius Abrams, 15, of 154 Howard avenue, Boston; Martin Phillips, 11, of 16 Rosedale avenue, Everett, and Francis A. Lacy, 11, of 36 Harding avenue, Everett.

Additional entries are expected before next Thursday, the deadline for registration and all prospective contestants are cautioned to mail their blanks before the expiring date.

There is still time for boys and girls to get the free contest manual by writing to Boston wing headquarters.

Preparations are being completed for the tournament with the staking out of a flying area in the center of Franklin Field through the co-operation of W. P. Long, chairman of Boston's Park Commission and his staff. A detail of police, including traffic and motorcycle officers will be present.

Experienced timers and judges will inspect the models of contestants and clock the flights. They will include Henry C. Newell of Waltham, a Harvard student; Henry Projansky of Revere, an aero-nautical engineer; William B. Harty of Findlen, William Steel of Wilmington, Arthur Gonsalves of Woburn, Webb R. Gallaher of Commonwealth avenue, Boston, William Rivera of Lexington, William Belcher of 10 Clifton street, Quincy, Samuel Gardiner, Y. M. C. A., Boston, Randolph C. Wills of Everett and Gaylon Townsend of 1038 Canterbury street, Roslindale.

The tournament will consist of three events, an all-Rales Glider event, a stick model event and a cabin (commercial) model event.

The chief prize is a 15-day all-expense-paid trip to Los Angeles for the high point scorer. He will also receive a handsome silver trophy as 1935 outdoor champion of the Boston wing.

Gold, silver and bronze medals and certificates of proficiency will be awarded to runners-up.

The contest is expected to prove one of the most spirited ever held in New England, as all the foremost model plane builders and fliers of this section of the country are entered.

The Birdmen's Question-Air

If you want to know anything about the Junior Birdmen, send in your question. It will be answered in this column. Aunt Dimaggio, of Rockville, Conn.— All contestants in the June 1 Air Races must build and fly their own models. No models may be sent to be flown by some one else. The Junior Birdmen organization has never given away airplane models, and no promise to send models to any one has been made.

W. F. Davis, of Mattapan—You may replace your Eagle bar for five cents. Give date you were awarded the bar, and the mark you received on your test.

George Hizzies of Dorchester—Send 25 cents to Junior Birdmen, Library Bureau, 7 Central Park West, New York city for a sweater emblem. You have been sent an order blank.

Anthony Castella, of Roslindale—There is no written Ace examination. To get an Ace bar, you must compete in at least three events of an annual Junior Birdmen meet (like the one on June 1) and win from first to fifth place in one event.

RADIO QUERIES AND ANSWERS

Q—Please settl" an argument If you can. I claim "Terry O'Toole" really comes from Ireland, while a friend says he comes from this country. M. A. C. of Cambridge.

A—He is really Irish and was born over there. However, he has been in this country since babyhood. He is a profound student of Irish tradition and folklore.

Q—How old is Romona on the Paul Whiteman program? Is that her name—if not, what is? How old is Lou Holtz on the same program? Wondering, of Cambridge.

A—She is in her early thirties. Her name is Romona Davis, and Lou Holtz is 38 years old.

Q—Is it true that Bing Crosby wears a toupe? Where can we get pictures of Ethel Merman, Jack Benny and Ruth Etting? Is it true that Joe Penner wants a release from radio? J. C. W. of Methuen.

A—No, it is not. This question has been asked by scores of readers. Write to the station where you hear each artist—mail is forwarded. Some send pictures—others do not. Joe is reported very anxious to leave broadcasting awhile. He wants to shape new material. He has obtained his release after his June schedule and will leave the air waves.

Q—Who plays the piano for "Uncle Don" Houghton each Sunday morning when he reads the Sunday Advertiser funnies? Who arranges the special funnies music?

R. L., of Brookline.

A—He attends to it all himself and does his own accompaniment. His real name is Ed Houghton and was formerly known as "The Yankee Philosopher" on the local waves.

Q—How about a description of Bill O'Connell on WNAC and where do we write for pictures of Bill and Carl Moore?

Retta and Rie, of Jamaica Plain.

A—He is of medium height, say 5 feet 10—weight about 140 lbs., dark brown hair and eyes—slim and with striking features. All picture queries should be mailed to stations, as we forth answering L. C. W. above.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

FRIDAY, MAY 24, 1935

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

Enlarge West Point

Our Government Funds Cannot Be Expended More Wisely

OVER the obstructions of Chairman McSwain, the House Committee on Military Affairs has reported out a bill to make a substantial increase in the number of cadets at West Point.

This measure is one of the most important before the present Congress for reasons which every intelligent American citizen understands.

Ever since its foundation, the United States Military Academy has provided the finest basic military education of any institution in the world.

Its primacy has never been challenged.

The training of its graduates has saved the nation from defeat in war, helped to repair the blunders of national unpreparedness and provided the small but essential framework on which in emergencies our entire military machine has been built.

And there is no more democratic institution in the country than West Point.

WHETHER from New England, the South, the West or elsewhere—ANY American boy who is appointed to it, no matter how poor he may be, is on an equal footing with his classmates.

All lines of wealth or social position are wiped out in the cadet corps—something which cannot be said of any college or university in the land.

Congress should pass without argument the bill now before it to enlarge the Academy.

It might well go farther, and provide for the establishment of a similar academy in the Western part of the United States.

No government funds have ever been spent to better purpose, and NONE CAN BE SPENT TO BETTER PURPOSE, than those devoted to the training of young Americans along West Point lines and in accordance with the high standards which West Point maintains.

Dangerous Censorship

Should Be Voided

THE press should be the free voice of a free people.

In New York a reporter has been jailed because he refused to reveal the source of information utilized in writing against gambling, vice and bail bond rackets.

The action of the judge, if sustained, would deprive every newspaper reader—which means everybody who can read—of the right to get ALL the news.

The courts recognize that communications of a lawyer to his client, of a parishioner to his priest—and usually of a patient to his doctor—are privileged.

Communications to a newspaper man are often of vastly greater moment to the public.

Representative Philip G. Bowker of Brookline has a bill pending on Beacon Hill which would protect newspaper writers from being compelled to disclose the source of information procured for publication.

Such protection is for the public's interests.

The safeguarding of these interests is the main design of all good government.

Frogs Are Singing

East Versus West

The frogs are singing again in swampy sections along the Bay State turnpikes.

But not with notes of triumph.

For the East's frog derby in New York's Central Park was a fiasco.

A pitiful three feet was the longest mark set by its aspirants for the jumping championship.

On the same day, at Angel's Camp, California, a long, lean streak of green lightning named Zip hurtled over a distance of twelve feet three and a half inches.

Nine feet and a fraction more than the false alarm that captured the honors of the East.

It's time that an aroused public opinion took these facts to heart and did something about them.

We have lost enough laurels already.

If this goes on we'll have to confess frankly that we're a lot of softies and hang our heads when the great open spaces are mentioned—where men are men and frogs are kangaroos.

Lafayette's Coach

Not About Football

The references you see in the news columns to Lafayette's coach are not about football.

They refer to the vehicle in which the Marquis rode from Boston to Charlestown 110 years ago to see the laying of the cornerstone of Bunker Hill Monument.

Henry Ford, who has built a few million "coaches" since then, happens to own this one.

He's lending it for the parade of 1935, when June 17 will see Bunker Hill Day for the first time a legal holiday in Boston.

A little coaching about the events around Bunker Hill would do most of us no harm.

That would stir up our patriotism and appreciation of the American liberty handed us by the heroes of the Revolution.

Town Management

It Can Be Good

Town management can be good.

Clinton has demonstrated that.

By inducing several new industries to come there in the past year, the officials have added hundreds of thousands of dollars to assessments.

The tax rate has dropped $4.

Notable gains have been made in employment.

With business men holding office instead of mere politicians, many Bay State towns and cities could copy Clinton's happy example.

It's Inconsistent

Don't You Think So?

Quincy held a primary election Tuesday, nominating Leo E. Mullin and Thomas S. Burgin as candidates for the mayoralty election June 11.

On the same day legislators voted against allowing Boston to select its mayors by the same system.

They evidently believe that what is sauce for the Quincy goose is not sauce for the Boston gander.

What do YOU think about it?

Blessed Words—HE LETS US ALONE

—Reproduced from the New York Mirror.

Be not surprised at the wonderful popularity of King George. His speech referred to "the love of my people," and millions of them, listening to the radio, wept. From every corner of the world came messages of congratulation and affection.

The King and Queen, all their family rode through London's streets in absolute security with millions crowding sidewalks, windows, housetops.

The best guard for a King is the respect and love of his people.

England has had great kings, fighters, conquerors, the Black Prince, Richard of the Lion Heart, Alfred, Henry VIII, Elizabeth, his great daughter.

None has enjoyed the national affection showered on King George. This picture shows the basis of that affection.

KING GEORGE LETS HIS PEOPLE ALONE. He lets business men manage their business, lets industrialists manage industry, lets his Prime Minister and Cabinet run the empire and decide its policy.

King George does not imitate Louis XIV of France, who said "I am the State." King George is a monarch, ruling by permission of his people, according to the will of his people, and they bless his name because HE LETS THEM ALONE.

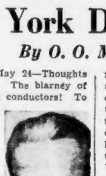
He assumes that those who built up the British Empire's greatness know how to build it still higher. No Britisher need ask him how much he must charge for cleaning a suit of clothes, what pigs he may raise, in what business he may engage. King George attends to HIS business, and lets his people attend to theirs, and they all say "THREE CHEERS FOR KING GEORGE."

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 24—Thoughts while strolling: The blarney of those Irish bus conductors! To old and middle-aged ladies they chirp: "Hurry up, girls!" Nuisance name to write: Woolicott. Billy Rose has become better known than his wife, Fannis Brice. Lou Clayton, Jack Lait and Ed Wynn.

Mrs. Allan Ryan might have just drifted down from the Milky Way. Who remembers when braces were galluses? Silver would sky-rocket with most of us down to the last dime. Cholly Knickerbocker's sky blue Rolls. Jimmy Durante suggests a drawing by Steig.



O. O. McIntyre

Add names that come up like a hiccup: Bernard Baruch. Best contributed jape of the month: John Chapman's yarn of the lady screaming "Someone has taken my pay and my aunt's pay!" And the cop yelling: "Cut out the pig Latin and tell what happened!" Most talented of the Bennetts—Joan.

Modern Katherines the Great: Cornell, Hepburn and Brush. What's become of the wink? No present day sculptor so widely discussed as the eccentric George Grey Barnard. Does anyone buy one of those canes you can make into a present? Cyrena Van Gordon has Maxine Elliot's regal walk.

Modern Damon and Pythias: Lee Olwell and George Buckley. Marc Connelley used to stand twice to make a shadow. Now look! Speaking of iron constitutions, there's Norman Kerry. And still the life of parties. White vest edgings again. I used to go for them. Those mincing deflorates around Automats.

City Interlude: On the elevated platform at Sixth avenue and 42d street is a penny in the slot for baited pet pigeons. When someone operates it the pigeons from Bryant Park swoop out around in a sudden cloud. And nearly everyone feeds the pigeons instead of himself.

William Rhinelander Stewart is probably New York's best known beau. The most intimate friend of Vincent Astor and best man at his wedding, he swirls with the top drawer set as well as attending the off-hand Bohemianisms sponsored by A. C. Blumenthal.

His squires a blueblood to one

Isn't It So?

You cannot live long on the past.

We should keep our endurance propped up with a smile and a stiff upper lip.

He who seeks trouble seldom misses it.

Flattery is like a perfume—to be smelt of but not swallowed.

Nature never worries.

Changes cannot be stopped or they would not be true to their name.

first night and the next a many splendored beauty of the stage or cinema. The superbly valeted type of man about town, wearing the mask of boredom but never quitting the chase. He is of illustrious ancestors and when there used to be rich persons he was one.

The popularity of Gene Tunney grows steadily. It is reflected by the sports writers who raved him gently at every opportunity—jibes about his bookishness, tall words and friendship for George Bernard Shaw. That phase has passed.

Today the tone is of sincere respect. He has not the easy going approach of the lovable Dempsey or the picturesque background, but respectable fans of boxing believe he did more to give the game class than any predecessor since Corbett. Champions from Sullivan down have, with minor exceptions, been loud-mouths, blow-hards. Tunney said he was going to quit when he fought Heeney and did.

As to his ability, he licked the champion of champions, Dempsey, twice. Such an astute historian as Bill Corum believes Tunney in top form could slash the bungling Baer to ribbons in a few rounds. Jack McAuliffe says he could have licked Sullivan. Tunney's aloofness is largely shyness. He has stuck by old friends.

The most spectacular yet shortest lived success among theatrical team-ups continues to be Gallagher and Shean. No alliance before or since has equalled it.

Obscurities out of burlesque, they rode the top waves on the notes of an exquisitely mediocre but amazingly catchy song. Shean continued a life of exemplary habits with fame and fortune, but Gallagher, then in his 50's, went a pace that soon cracked him up for permanent invalidism and the wheel chair.

I was a press agent during his last professional days when in their Follies number in Boston he was led half -lind to the wings to wait his cue in agony. Their sons, incidentally, are now carrying on over the radio with the original song.

There's fun in a prowl in one of those only-for-the-rich specialty shops where oh, so diffident clerks in their haberdashery glory have to detach themselves from day-dreaming to wait on commoners.

They sell such dodads as waterproof cigaret cases for bathing, twin face clocks for between beds, compasses for cross-country drives, pedometers for golfers and such.

But what fascinated me was one of those long bell yanks they use to summon butlers in English dramas. I'd like one for the Gallipolis sittin' room if I dared.

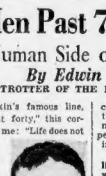
Men Past 70 Active

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF THE HEARST METROTONE NEWS

To Dr. Pilkin's famous line, "Life begins at forty," this corollary occurs to me: "Life does not end at 70."



Edwin C. Hill

It is prompted by three pictures popping up before my eyes in the news of the day.

One shows a musical, athletic -looking man seated before a gigantic clay model, the hammer and chisel of the sculptor in his hands. He is George Gray Barnard.

The second is that of a tall, lean player on the courts with a youngster who might be his grandson. That man is Gustav V, King of Sweden.

And the third, a short, dapper gray-haired speaker, holding a political rally with his eloquence, is that of David Lloyd George.

ALL PAST SEVENTY

Barnard has turned 70. Gustav will be 76 next month. Lloyd George is in his 72d year.

New York has just seen the first general exhibition of Barnard's work in 20 years.

It has marveled at his eight-foot figure of Christ, represented as a brawny carpenter, standing with head raised to heaven, chest expanded and hands behind the head to give emphasis to the muscles of the arms.

This work is considered among the best of a master whose genius is comparable to that of Rodin and Michelangelo.

In the past, according to Barnard, Christ has been too much represented as a weakling.

And he has given Him to us here with amazing physical vitality and yet without the loss of the spiritual attributes.

PUPIL OF RODIN

Born of poor parents in Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, George Gray Barnard was reared in Iowa and with his first earnings as an engraver, studied sculpture in Chicago, eventually getting to Paris where, in continued poverty, he became a pupil of Rodin.

By the time he reached thirty his genius was recognized. A man of great vision and magnificent dreams, he lives and works in a sphere apart with Plato, Shakespeare and such immortals.

He spent the last ten years within a radius of two miles of his home in order that he might complete his "gift to civilization," the model of the Rainbow Memorial Arch, a monument to peace, sixty feet high and containing 28 figures.

As his son says of him, "He lives in perpetual fear that he will not accomplish all that he has set out for himself."

KING LIKES TENNIS

Gustav of Sweden is the great-grandson of a soldier who commanded a squad of French troops at the execution of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette.

That subaltern, Jean Baptiste Bernadotte, was destined to become one of Napoleon's great marshals and to ascend the throne of Sweden in 1810.

Thus the enemy of a king became a king, and just as paradoxically, the reigning house of Sweden, founded by conquest, has kept the country out of war for more than 100 years.

On the Riviera they know Gustav as Mr. G., a likable gentleman who is undoubtedly the greatest tennis enthusiast that the world has ever known.

Back in Stockholm they know him as the king whose industry and popularity alone have kept Sweden from becoming a democracy. His energy seems inexhaustible, and in trying to explain it to an interviewer, he said:

"You get up early, stay in harness all day, avoid overworking and undue strain and go to bed before midnight."

* * *

A 600-acre farm in Surrey was the Elbe of David Lloyd George.

For 10 years he has kept one eye on his politics and the other on the succession of Labor and Conservative cabinets in London which followed the disintegration of his Liberal Party.

This century has known no shrewder politician than the wily Welshman "who won the war and the peace" for England.

Once more he's the man on horseback riding hard on "a new deal program" and his star appears to be ascending. History doesn't take very long in its repeating.

It was only 25 years ago that the radical from Wales made his Limehouse speech in defense of the 1909 Liberal budget.

And there he predicted that his plan and his party's plan would make poverty "as remote from the people of this country as the wolves which once infested its forests."

These are the times again for such promises and perhaps on them Lloyd George, like Gladstone, can come back into power, after having passed his three score and ten.

Hypocrisy

By Edgar A. Guest

I would not dare to cry aloud
The little wrong I see
Lest one among the hearing crowd
Should shout the wrong in me.

I would not dare to fling a stone
Against another's sin
Lest every secret vault I own
Should have the light let in.

So high the goals men want to reach;
So short of them they fall.
Till I can practice as I preach
I will not preach at all.

Americanism Only Ism For Americans

By Henry L. Roosevelt

Assistant Secretary of the Navy

In a Speech at San Francisco

THE work of building our Navy up to treaty establishment is well under way, and the West Coast has benefited by the increase in the Navy. Under the wisdom of the Administration that work is going ahead, and the details are helpfully tied in with the measures looking toward industrial recovery. The fleet is a familiar sight in your magnificent bay, and you are going to see a Navy, presently, that will be second to none.

THE American Navy is an essential projection of the American people, a vital agency of the American government. The navy was in the mind of Theodore Roosevelt when he wrote, late in 1918, and not long before he died, that the great need of the time was—I quote—"A thorough-going and absolute Americanism throughout the land."

The end of the World War was in sight when he wrote, and he envisaged the troubled years of readjustment that would follow. He foresaw confusion and dissension among the nations, and the economic tangles that would inevitably come upon the world.

OUR people are today passing through critical times. It would be idle and foolish to pretend otherwise. The foundations of our economic structure have been shaken, and our citizens have been subjected, along with economic woes, to insidious assaults upon their morale.

Old institutions have been swept away, and new institutions have arisen, and are under test to see if they will stand or not. In these shifting and uncertain days—the worst now, we hope, behind us—one thing alone has sustained us—the American spirit.

What is the American spirit? In this Western country, which was born of that very thing, and which is today the highest exemplification of its achievement, I doubt if many of you have taken time to think about it.

It is the spirit which animated the first settlers, who found themselves with the stormy Atlantic at their backs, and a trackless continent in front of them, faced with the problem of justifying their existence. It was root hog or die!

They rooted. New Englander, New Yorker, Pennsylvanian, Jerseyan, Virginian, Carolinian—they went to work with their axes and their rifles, and presently with their plows, and created a new thing on the earth—the association of English Colonies, which in time cut themselves away from the Old World, and from all the ancient roots of their lives, to carve out with their hands a new nation in a new place.

IT WAS, in the words of Abraham Lincoln, a nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created free and equal. Not without pains and arduous toil did they gain the right to continue, in the aloof laboratory of the Americas, their experiment in democracy. They fought the War of the Revolution—a long, hard war, through which the soldiers marched without rations, and fought without pay, and campaigned without the diversions and alleviations that brighten the ordeals of our current heroes. They had a man, George Washington, the first of the Americans. They entered the war an association of Colonies; they emerged, after much travail, a nation, a union of thirteen sovereign States, banded together indissolubly for the common good.

WHEN General Washington became President Washington, and his faith was expressed in these lines which I shall read to you:

"My ardent desire is, and my aim has been as far as depended upon the Executive Department, to comply strictly with all our engagements, foreign and domestic; but to keep the United States free from political connections with every other country, to see them independent of all and under the influence of none.

"In a word, I want an American character, that the Powers of Europe may be convinced that we act for ourselves, and not for others. This, in my judgment, is the only way to be respected abroad and happy at home; and not, by becoming partisans of Great Britain or France, create serious animosities, disturb the public tranquility and destroy, perhaps forever, the cement which binds the Union.

"It remains to be seen whether this country will stand upon independent ground, or be directed in its political concerns by any other nation. A little time will show who are its true friends, or, what is synonymous, who are true Americans."

THESE noble words are from a letter addressed to a Virginian. You see, however, that Washington himself had gone beyond Virginia: He was an American, and in him the American character that he wished to create found its first example.

Listen, World!

THE PRICE OF MANHOOD

Manhood was the most precious of all gifts to the Blackfeet Indians. It meant great privilege, greater responsibility.

Elsie Robinson

A young Blackfeet was not granted the status of a man at a tomatically. He had to prove his fitness—and the proof lay through fearful ordeal.

Manhood, with the Blackfeet, was supposed to come at maturity. So a boy was only twelve or thirteen when he faced his tribal initiation. Those who saw that test never forgot it. One by one the elders gathered in the Chief's tent. Grizzled old men, lusty young warriors, proud yearlings with horrified memory still lurking in their eyes.

BOY'S ORDEAL

Quietly the ceremonial pipe was passed around. The air grew dim with coiling smoke. Only the hiss and flutter of the little fire broke the heavy silence.

At last the Chief arose, led the boy forward — a slender, naked child, who yesterday had been playing with the other cubs.

Reaching the center of the tent, they stood still, the boy facing the Chief, his back turned to the watching warriors. The Chief stooped. His hands plunged swiftly. He stood back.

The child still stood erect. But now pain passed, wave upon shuddering wave, the length of his thin body. Sweat dripped—gathered in pools beneath glazing eyes and clenched lips. But he made no sound. Slowly he turned—

COULD HE DO IT?

The watchers' eyes narrowed in approval. Through the boy's tender chest flesh a long thong of buffalo hide had been laced.

Before him on the ground, tied fast to the ends of the thong, a huge buffalo skull, heavy as lead. And along the length of that bloody, weighted thong, lay—manhood.

For now, without flinching, crying out, or touching the thong with his hands, the boy must jump until, by his own struggle, he had ripped himself free of that burden. Could he do it? Then he became a Blackfeet Brave.

If not—if he fainted or surrendered—he must live out the rest of his life in shame, rated and despised as one of the women.

Now was this sheer savagery. The life of the tribe depended on the courage and endurance of its Braves. A man's spirit could not conquer fear and pain, he was not only unreliable but he was actually a menace to his people.

He must be tested and proven before he could be trusted with a man's honors and burdens. Seldom did a Blackfeet boy fail in that awful ordeal.

Today a child becomes a man or woman seemingly without price or penalty. Nevertheless, civilized life waits with ordeals crueler than any of the Blackfeet ever devised.

Life does not pierce a child's flesh with a thong, nor weight it with a buffalo skull.

But there are more agonizing piercings, heavier weightings.

Loneliness. Change. Maladjustment to strange surroundings. Fear. Betrayal by those one has trusted. Misunderstandings by those who are most dear. Shock. Pressure. Weariness and discomfort.

These ordeals lacerate the spirit and burden the brain far more viciously than the Blackfeet's tests. Yet they must be faced, inevitably.

CAN YOU TAKE THEM? Then you're fit for adult life . . . you've proven your ability to carry a grown-up job.

OR ARE THEY TOO MUCH FOR YOU? Must you seek a safer, softer spot? Then life will punish you as surely as the Blackfeet punished a cowardly lad.

You may not have to wear women's clothes—as he did. You may seemingly enjoy full recognition as an adult. But every day in a thousand ways your fellow man will show that he "has your number."

It is better to take a beating and stand the gaff, no matter how much it hurts, than face the sneers and snickers of the Gang.
